Progress shows advances

SPRINGS — "I was ressed by the large machinery — the es seem to be their biggest stuff, ipment that is not Pennsylvania," Dale Bresler, a County dairyman the Ag Progress re.

And along with it the price tags. One big combine now costs more than what a 200-acre farm cost just 15 years ago, this reporter learned. Bigger equipment, bigger farms, greater efficiency, and bigger price tags — they all seem to go hand in hand. "Prices were 'real high'," [Continued on Page 22]

This year's two new queens are Robin Esbenshade, 15, and Jodi Zeamer, 12.

Robin, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Esbenshade, Manheim R7, was chosen from five senior division girls to represent the county.

The triumphs in the show ring netted the 37-year old hog farmer $6500 and $1150, respectively.

Neither the "spotlight" nor the jingling in the "piggy bank" stopped there. Parlett had taken six of his animals to the show to see how he could place nationally, then [Continued on Page 13]

As of Thursday, Wolf was receiving 57 cents per 10-pound bag of table potatoes. He deals exclusively with the table stock market. By early

Ag Progress aptly named

The Ag Progress Days is aptly named because it annually shows the advances that are being made in both agriculture and agribusiness Think back just a couple years - or 10 or 15 - and it's remarkable how rapidly things are changing in the field.

In a very real sense, this makes farmers efficiency experts. Consider the amount of production and the costs involved and the receipts received Costs are going up, but prices received are often up. If continuing to produce under such circumstances isn't being efficient and progressive, then I wonder what is.

Those involved in agriculture and agribusiness - and very especially the farmers - are to be commended for their fine showings year after year

Ag Progress Days for the Bicentennial Year contrasted old and new.

Field demonstrations were a popular attraction at Ag Progress.

UNTIED BRETHREN

Lesson for August 29, 1976

Background Scripture: John 10:1-18; 1 Corinthians 1:10-31; 3:5-9

Devotional Reading: Philippians 2:1-13.

Before uniting with the Methodist Church by denominational merger, I was a minister of the Evangelical United Brethern Church. In preparing my weekly worship bulletin, I, like many other EUB pastors, had to be careful of one rather recurring typographical error. It was more than a few times that I found my masthead publicizing that we were 'Untied" rather that "United" Brethern. And there were always some congregations for which the former term was more appropriate than the latter.

To Who Do We Belong?

The New Testament makes it abundantly clear that we are called to be united: "...that you be united in the same mind and the same judgement" (I Corinthians 1:10). But it is also evident from this book that even in the early churches Christians were sometimes more "untied" than "united." Paul says to the church at Corinth: "...it has been reported to me...that there is quarreling among you" (:11).

Yet, as Paul goes on, it is apparent that there is more than just "quarreling," there is also factionalism, "party spirit." There is the "Paul faction," the "Apollos faction," the "Cephas (Peter) faction," and even a group known as the "Christ faction" (tray that on for religious one-upmanship!).

"Terrible!", we exclaim from our comfortable contemporary perspective. We are properly aghast at that kind of divisiveness in the Church of Jesus Christ. Methodists are scandalized at such factionalism, as are Presbyterians, Baptists, Lutherans, UCC's, Disciples, Episcopalians and all other sectarians!

Despite what the Corinthian Christians were saying, they did not really belong to Paul, Apollos, Cephas, or any other apostle. They belonged to Christ alone.

Not With Eloquence

Furthermore, in their exaltion of individual apostles over others, Paul saw the dangerous trend toward focusing on the wisdom of individual interpreters rather than the gospel of Christ. Christ had sent Paul to preach the gospel, but "not with elequent wisdom lest the cross of Christ be emptied of its power" (1:17).

No, said Paul, they were wrong in identifying themselves as being followers of any of Christ's apostles. Let no man say, "I belong to Luther" or "I belong to John Calvin." Where is the line between legitimate and fruitful sectariancism and destructive "party spirit"?

What we need to remember, says Paul, is that all religious leaders are but "servants" through whom God accomplishes his purposes. Their purpose is to exalt the Christ rather than themselves. We are all but "fellow workers," but God alone "gives the growth" (3:7).

So, let us be united, not "untied."

TO BEWARE OF SILO GAS

Silo filling time is here-and there is always danger of poisonous gases forming for the first 10 days after filling the silo; we have known of many cases of suffocation and severe respiratory damage from these gases. A partly filled silo is very dangerous and should never be entered without running the blower for 10 to 15 minutes. Most of these gases are heavier than air and will collect on the surface of the silage or at the bottom of the silo chute; some are yellow in color while others are colorless; most of them will have the odor of laundry bleach and irritate the eyes and nose. Farmers are urged to warn their employees and their family about the danger of this gas formation. Don't take chances from the time the silo is being filled for at least 10 days.

TO EVALUATE FEED SUPPLIES

The fall season is approaching and soon the winter feeding schedule will be needed. Where will your herd or flock get their most economical feed nutrients this winter? With cattle feeders and dairymen no doubt sufficient supplies of forages such as hay and silage will give the cheapest production. The good corn crop that is now maturing will no doubt make more milk or pounds of beef per acre when made into corn silage. Cattle feeders will have to manage their feeding operations very carefully because of the depressed market conditions; gains from silage and roughages will surely be cheaper than from grain feeding. Feed costs are one of the most important parts of efficient production. Take time to decide from where your cheapest nutrients are to come.

TO STUDY THE CATTLE MARKETS

Cattle feeders have been in a bind for most of the summer; the forecasts are not encouraging for much of an increase in fat cattle prices. Prices of feeders and replacements are, as usual, extremely high when considering the fat market prices. This means that the producer should get well acquainted with market trends and conditions so that he can move quickly for his own benefit. Too many feeders are holding fat cattle waiting for the market to improve; I hope this will happen very soon but it appears to be very slow in coming; perhaps these feeders should start to move a load or two of their heavier

MAKING GOOD SILAGE

MUST IT BE A GAMBLE?

NEWS RELEASE . . .

August 25, 1976

Disappointment and dollar losses go hand in hand with a "bad batch" of silage. When this happens the livestock owner is bound to probe for answers. Why didn't it turn out well? What went wrong?

According to Dr. Marshall E. McCullough, chairman of the Animal Science Department at the University of Georgia and recognized as one of the foremost authorities on silage in the U.S., the diagnosis would probably relate to failure to get a good fermentation of the silage.

"The first 96 hours in the ensiling process are the most crucial of all", says Dr. McCullough. "The critical point within a given silo is speed of the fermentation."

"The usefulness of . . . additives is determined by their ability to reduce energy loss in the silo."

Prof. McCullough reports these results using the active ingredient in Master Mix ENSIL-ATE:

First NE region Chianina field day held

By JOANNE SPAHR

WRIGHTSVILLE - More than 500 breeders of Chianina beef cattle assembled at Dutchman Breeding Systems, Lauxmont Farms, on Saturday, August 21, for the first Northeastern Region Chianina Field Day.

This breed, used primarily as a terminal cross, has the distinction of being the world's large breed of beef cattle. Brought into the country no more than 4-½ years ago, it is gaining a following because of its ability to upgrade other breeds in size and growth rate. And, in comparison to other exotic breeds used in a cross, Chianinas have very few calving problems.

"The calves come out long, slim shouldered, and slim at the hips," explained Dr. Lee Miller, a Chianina breeds and veterinarian from Woodsboro, Md.

The highlights of this first field day were judging contests in the morning, a beef barbeque for lunch, a benefit sale in the afternoon, and an exhibition and showing of project steers and heifers by junior club members. Two of the best animals were also chosen to attend the national show in Kansas City, Mo., on November 12 and 13.

The two animals picked to attend the national competition were a half-blood Chianina Angus steer owned by Mar Lee Farms, Woodsboro, Md., and a three-quarter Chianina owned by Twin Oaks Farms, Quarryville, Pa.

The donation sale, held to raise funds for the promotion of Chianinas in the Northeast Region, was a success with several items selling well into the $100 bracket. One quilt even hit the 200 mark.

Three Chianina animals were sold as part of the auction. A three-quarter bull brought $225, a pair of heifers, which were a half-blood and a three-quarter blood together brought $925, and another bred half-blood brought $320.

The afternoon's junior show had a total of 40 entries and saw some stiff competition. The grand champion for the show was an animal owned by Robert Miller of Mar Lee Farms, Woodsboro, Md. The reserve champion was shown by Janice Kaylor of Elizabethtown, Pa.

Top placings for the various classes are as follows:

Class I - Bret Ritter, Boiling Springs; Class II - Jim Glass, Millbrook, N Y.; Class III - Janice Kaylor, Elizabethtown, Pa.; Class IV - Robert Miller, Woodsboro, Md.; Class V - Robert Miller

Approximately 150 of Lauxmont Farm's 200 Chianina animals were judged during the morning's festivities. The top winners in each division were: Men's - Bill Halloway; Women's - Phyllis Fry, Top place individual - Jeff Treadway; Top team - Lancaster County; Weight guessing - John Frey

The official for the day was Nick Overpeck, Clinton, Ind

Some "celebrities" who were on hand to enjoy the day were Dr. John Phillips, chief executive officer of the American Chianina Association, Jim Glass, national director for the Northeast Region, John Coble, special activities director of the American Chianina Association, and Richard Koonce, field representative of the American Chianina Journal. Of course, there was also Lombard, the 2850 pound purebred Chianina bull which has the distinction of being the only purebred Chianina bull in the Northeastern States.

According to Ron Kohr, president of Dutchman Cattle Breeding Systems, the field day will become annual event held at Lauxmont Farms. The 1400-acre farm will also be the site of the November 5 Chianina cattle sale to be held in conjunction with the Eastern National Livestock Exhibition, Timonium, Md.

cattle each week. When many cattle get to weighing over 1200 pounds they are carrying excess fat and will get a lower yield grade and less price per pound. Following the markets daily is strongly suggested at this time of the year.

TO MANAGE ALFALFA STANDS

Again I repeat the importance of good managing of the alfalfa stand, if it is to be kept for next year. Cutting in early September is acceptable if the stand has been allowed to come into nearly full bloom at one of the previous cuttings. However, to make all cuttings in the pre-bloom stage is dangerous and may hurt the root system. In this area, alfalfa plants are developing root rhizomes during mid to late September and the plant should not be cut at that time. Cutting in early September, or after a killing frost, should not hurt well fertilized stands that have been allowed to reach nearly full bloom at one time during the season.

sold them, and had a nicely fattened "piggy bank" in their place. To be more specific, the little hog was stuffed with $10,975 - not at all a bad haul for selling just six pigs. Having broken his way into this kind of recognition and fortune, the modest, yet enthusiastic young farmer is hoping to do more of the same at future events. He'll have his next crack at it at the National Barrow Show in Austin, Minn. which is scheduled to take place in mid-September.

The Summer Spotlight is sponsored annually by the Chester White Swine Record Association of Rochester, Indiana, and is open to breeders from all across the United States. Close to 200 head were shown and subsequently sold, with the final tally showing $148,250 in the cash register. It was the second highest Chester White sale ever. Ninety-eight boars averaged $1009 and the 90 gilts averaged $548.

Aside from the grand champion animals sold by Parlett, he sold a ninth place (Class II) boar for $1800 and a ninth place (Class II) gilt for $750. The boar was a litter mate to the champion, which, incidentally, was purchased by Walter Schminke and Son of VanHorne, Iowa. The reserve champion gilt went to Ernest Schmidt of Alva, Okla.

At his farm, which is comfortably nestled in the rolling southern York County hills, Parlett has 40 sows. He specializes in Chester Whites and Poland Chinas. Most are raised for breeding purposes, which leaves only a few to be sold as feeder pigs. In all, he keeps 300 head and they're fed in comparatively liberal amounts. The champion hog producer believes he can come up with a better product that way.

Although this was the first champion Parlett ever showed on the national level, he's no stranger to blue ribbons and trophies. He had his first grand champion at the York County 4-H Roundup when he was 10 years old and has had a consistent string of good showings ever since. For three years in a row, for example, he had the grand champion carcass barrow at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium, and since 1974 his bred gilts have been unbeaten at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

One of the directors for the Pennsylvania Chester White Association, Parlett believes his choice of breed is a growing one. It is strongest in the Midwest, Southeast and Southwest, he said, but popularity is increasing nearly everywhere. As a hog breeder for nearly all of his life, he has some thoughts on what might be in store for IM-PRUV-ALL PRODUCTS are feed balances for the lactic acid making bacteria. When added to the silage, it starts the ferment immediately, and in three days the total ferment is usually over. This means it usually makes the total 1½% lactic acid in three days instead of the normal three weeks. The shorter and lower heat levels save your energy, vitamin A and digestable protein.

RECENT RESULTS FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY SILAGE TEST showed that the IM—PRUV—ALL treated silage had 90 times more bacteria on the second day than the untreated.

Other studies have shown that the IM—PRUV—ALL silages many times have averaged 6-8% higher in T.D.N. It's just like feeding 6-8 pds. more grain, or you can feed 6-8 pds. less grain to achieve similar production.

Queen chosen

to know a lot of new people," commented the pretty princess who has been involved with 4-H for six years. An alternate in this year's Lancaster County dress revue, Robin has had six years with the Mt. Joy 4-H sewing club, two with a cooking club, and one with a cake decorating club.

The junior queen, Jodi Zeamer, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Zeamer, 14 E. Main St., Mountville. A quiet person, she was also chosen out of five candidates. Her experiences in 4-H so far have been with cooking, bicycling and sewing clubs.

Two queen alternates were also chosen during Thursday evening's festivities. June Grube was the alternate in the senior division, and Lisa King was alternate in the junior division.

Although many of the gifts and awards handed out during the evening were known ahead of time, one came as a total surprise to its recipient. The gift was a certificate of outstanding service presented to Mr. Robert Malick, director of WGAL-TV's Noonday on Eight program. Mr. Marion R. Deppen, Penn State's assistant extension director, presented the award.

Malick, who has been involved with agricultural broadcasting for at least 25 years, and is the "one and only" agriculture broadcaster for WGAL, was pleased with the award, saying, "It's the people I work with, such as the extension people and the 4-H'ers, that make the job so interesting."

Other awards that kept the audience in suspense were those for the winners in the talent competition and for excellence in sewing and cooking. This year, for the first time, a $25 cash prize was given by Farm Women Society Group 19 to the top girl in sewing and cooking.

The winners of the talent competition were Jim Kreider, first place, for a solo, Judy Fulmer, second, for a dramatization, and Kenneth Brubaker, third, for a guitar and vocal solo.

Cathy Brubaker, this year's state dress revue champion, received the cash award from Society 19 for top sewer, and Martha Gregory received the award in the cooking division.

Others receiving gifts during the evening awards ceremony were Christine Ebersole, Susan Howell, Judy Weaver, Cheryl Gingrich, Jean Martin, Rhonda Witmer, Julie Bare, Cathy Brubaker, Maureen Doyle, Laurie Lehman, Sally Martin, Suzanne Martin, Trudy Nissley, Laura Wunderly, Anita Braightmeyer, Robin Esbenshade, Jund Grube, and Mary Ellen Lee. These girls were all given awards for participation in dress revue.

Those receiving gifts for demonstrations were Mary Anne Bassalin, Edith Yoder, Rosemary Nissley, Glenn Seidman, Virginia Smith, Cindy Risser, Judi Anderson, Carole Ebersole, Genevieve Gibson, Jane Gregory, Martha Gregory, Susan Martin, Karen Mullen and Wanda Yoder.

Public speaking award winners were Phil Risser and Judi Anderson.

Those receiving awards for participating in the photography contest were Lisa Bloom, Bernard Nissley, and Darwin Nissley.

Amanda King and Natalie Immel won awards for their horsemanship.

Dave Brubaker received a gift for participating in the safe tractor driving contest.

County award winners were: June Grube, Gayle Kline, Nancy Mays, Louann Brenneman, Sandy Galbreath, Sandy Schmuck, Tim Swarr, Kerry Boyd, Phil Crouse, Sandra Frey, Robert Witmer, Jane Gregory, Sandra Hamilton, Jody Henkel, Carol Stinson, Judi Anderson, Heidi Bailey, Lashon Bussell, Jenny Weber, Owen Conway, Dwight Houser, Jon Bitler, Anita Augsburger, Joyce Aument, Mary DeLong, Pam Wivell, Ronald Martin, Bernard Nissley, Patty Shenk, and Peg Shenk.

State winners were Tim Long, Linda Martin, Kim Weaver, Judy Zimmerman, Kenneth Brubaker, Anthony Eberly, Robert Hess, Kevin Rohrer, Ted Gray, Paul Reitzel, Andrea Gibson, and Susan Sollenberger.

National awards recipients were Kenneth Brubaker, Jane Gregory, Kerry Boyd, Cherri Gochnauer, Suzanne Martin, Jane McSparran, Martha Gregory, the eight senior dress revue winners, Judi Anderson, and Glenn Seidman. Susan Harrold and Debra Crider were county participants.

Results from the afternoon's judging competition were as follows:

Ceiling raised

WASHINGTON, D.C. — An increase in the ceiling on family income permissible to qualify for low-income rural housing loans through the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) was announced recently by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The ceiling on "adjusted family income" was raised from $8500 to $10,000 for the mainland 48 states.

Families whose income is within the limit may qualify for rural housing loans at interest rates lower than the maximum rate, which currently is 8½ per cent. The Housing Act authorizes loans to low-income families at interest rates as low as one per cent, depending on the family's income and size and the amount of the loan.

FmHA administers insured housing loans to families of low and moderate income who lack other sources of housing credit at reasonable rates and terms. The FmHA rural service is provided in the countryside and towns of up to 10,000 population, and in designated towns of 10,000 to 20,000 outside of standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSA's) where the secretary of agriculture and secretary of housing and urban development have certified a shortage of housing mortgage funds.

Rural housing loans are made through FmHA county offices. Office locations are listed in local telephone directories under U.S. government.

The reserve champion trio belonged to Robert Hess, who sold his animals for 48 cents per pound.

Aside from the above champions, the following exhibitors had class winners:

Tom Baum, Philip Risser, Tim Swarr, Scott Sipling, and Bernadine Gish.

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent Jay Irwin, who guided the 4-H'ers with their projects, described the show and sale as "real good." A total of 34,475 pounds of pork were sold for a sum of $17,037.37. The average weight per pig was 214 pounds. The average price paid was $49.42 per hundredweight.

FFA agribusinessman

The four named were selected from among the 747 members who have been recommended by their respective State FFA Associations to receive the FFA American Farmer Degree.

Lynn Groff has taken advantage of every learning experience that has come his way, and today, the energetic young man from Ephrata is reaping the benefits.

Lynn, who is the Eastern Region nominee for the FFA Star Agribusinessman of America award, is the product department group leader of Victor Weaver, Inc., a poultry and egg processing plant in New Holland.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Groff, Lynn never lived on a farm, largely because of the high cost of land in Lancaster County. But his FFA and vocational agriculture training under Clifford Day provided him with opportunities to expand his knowledge in agricultural-related industries.

"Land costs are probably why I got involved in the processing of farm products rather than production," he explains. "I feel that the FFA supervised work experience programs helped me decide to find a job closely related to agriculture."

Immediately after graduating from Garden Spot High School, Lynn was employed at Weaver's as a group leader in the slicing department. Since then, through hard work and dedication, he has moved up in the organization.

Weaver's started as a small business processing 200 birds a week. Today, the company processes more than 70,000 birds a day, employs more than 1,000 persons and distributes its products across the nation and overseas.

"The expanding business has been made possible to a large extent by the increasing number of products that the company has successfully tested . and marketed," Lynn says.

Lynn's employers took notice of his work. He was offered the position of product development technician, which required developing new products and equipment. "It was a challenge I accepted with great anticipation," Lynn recalls. "In product development you work with all areas of the plant."

"The food industry is an ever-changing field and we must stay abreast of new trends and processing methods," he says. "When problems occur on production, we are asked to find solutions. We are constantly striving to improve our products and trying to reduce costs while at the same time maintaining quality."

After working for a year and a half as development technician, Lynn again was offered a promotion, this time as department group leader. Again, he was given more responsibilities.

"This job requires working with sales and marketing very closely," he says. "You need to learn what the consumer wants and develop products along those lines."

"In my work, we are always trying new products," he adds. "It's my responsibility to get production started and keep a close watch on the quality. Trying to solve the problems that arise with a new product is a constant challenge in my job. Breakdowns must be kept at a minimum to keep all operations flowing smoothly."

Lynn will never forget the valuable education he received while a member of FFA Vocational Agriculture programs. "My FFA training prepared me well in keeping complete and accurate records, which are important in my job," he says.

"I have enjoyed my association with FFA. It has helped me develop my leadership abilities in the chapter, community, church, and my work. Speaking before FFA groups did a great deal to develop my self-confidence which is essential in supervising others."

The ambitious agribusinessman is satisfied with his success, but he is optimistic of an even brighter future. "I intend to stay at Weaver's," he says, "but I'll be open to any further opportunities that come along."

As Star Agribusinessman for their respective regions, each will receive a cash award of $500 presented by the National FFA Foundation at the National Future Farmers of America Convention in Kansas City, Missouri, November 9-12. At that time, one will be named Star Agribusinessman of America and will receive an additional $500. A committee of judges including leaders in business, agriculture, and education will meet in Kansas City on November 11 to select the Star Agribusinessman of America.

The Star Agribusinessman of America Award was established in 1969 to recognize the growing number of FFA members becoming established in agribusiness occupations. Like the Star Farmer of America Award which is the highest honor for an FFA member becoming established in farming, the Star Agribusinessman Award recognizes the FFA member whose achievements in an agriculture related occupation and leadership are most outstanding in the nation.

The Star Agribusinessmen of America awards are provided by the Future Farmers of America Foundation, Inc., which receives its funds by annual contributions from about 1,600 business and industrial concerns, organizations, and individuals.

WOOD BURNERS

Shenandoah's line of wood burning heaters feature thermostatically controlled dampers which allow you to dial the amount of heat you want, just like conventional home heating systems. By simply turning it down at night the fire burns lower, but not out. In the morning, by turning the dial up, it allows more air to the firebox, consequently, more heat to the home. It's as simple as that.

They have been engineered to efficiently utilize the maximum amount of heat from the fire, with very little heat loss up the chimney. For example, a fireplace is only about 8 per cent efficient and a modern oil burner about 68 per cent efficient. A thermostatically controlled wood heater is close to an oil burner in the 58-60 per cent range.

hog producers in future years, but he attributes much of his present success to just plain luck.

Nevertheless, Parlett shared some of his ideas: In picking what he thought would make a good pig, he selected and bred for individuals which would be long, lean and sound. He watches for good growth, properly placed feet and legs - those which aren't set too straight and show a little "bounce" to them. He feeds a 16 per cent protein ration in generous amounts to encourage good growth and proper development.

To illustrate what he meant, Parlett pointed out a few of his animals, which lazily relaxed in their dry and dusty surroundings. Although the grand champion boar was no longer part of the herd, his former owner remembered him. "He weighed 355 pounds and was seven months old when I sold him," Parlett announced. And he stood tall enough to be belt-high.

Of all the traits he looks for, Parlett isn't quite sure about the height. But so far judges have singled out the tall individuals, and doing well in the show circuit means bringing something in which the judges want to see. So Parlett tries to guess what the judges will want next. He personally believes pigs might be being bred too tall, and he has heard complaints from a number of commercial men who make the same claim. It's a changing situation — it has been over the years and Parlett expects that to continue. But for just once, anyway, he has managed to come up with the top prize, and he has his sights set for more.

PINK EYE REMEDY

A new economical solution to pink eye that saves time, stops losses and is simple to use, has been developed by Fearing Manufacturing Company.

The product, called Bull's Eye, is an economical protective eye patch made of a tough, yet soft, non-irritating material that guards the infected eye from irritants such as insects, tall grass, brush and sunlight, eliminating the need for confinement and allowing medication to work more effectively and longer for fast healing.

After medication and the Bull's Eye patch are applied, the infected animal can be returned to pasture or lot without fear of disease spreading or not healing.

Bull's Eye has a built in tab handle that makes adhesive dispensing and application easier. The patch is made of a soft material formed into a cup shape that keeps the patch away from the eye and from irritation caused by rubbing. One universal size fits all breeds, adults or calves.

Several application adhesive comes with the kit and will hold the patch firmly during the healing period. After this period the adhesive loses its bonding strength and the patch falls off naturally.

Bull's Eye is packaged in kits containing 10 patches and one tube of adhesive.

The farmers's efficiency is so great that he can produce on five acres about three times as much wheat as you can eat, twice as much rice, about 40 percent more cotton and soybeans than you can use, and a fourth more feed grains than it takes to feed the livestock and poultry producing your meat, milk, and eggs.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR AND PERK YOUR EARS

Hear Dr. Corson of Middleburg, Ind. tell about the wonderful success of electronically treated seed for bigger roots, larger and better quality crops; and about the natural mineral, M48G, being mined in Oregon, which is producing outstanding results in the soil and in livestock feed, reducing feed consumption around 10 percent to 30 percent, drastically reducing diseases and mortality, greatly increasing fertility, hatchability and vigor.

Chickens stop vent picking without debeaking. Stopped hog cannibalism at Elizabethtown. Reduced cage fatique and mortality quickly near New Holland.

Will quickly condition clay or poor or mistreated soil. Produces larger and better quality crops.

Dr. Corson will also tell you of a new enzyme and bacteria spray which his company is developing which is a great help to soil and plants, holding more moisture in soil through cation exchange, plants readily absorb and store dew, less rain and irrigation is needed, and soil nutrients are released.

Instead of cleaning afterbirth from cows and treating sick livestock and poultry, Dr. Corson wants to do the world more good by prevention. He will bring two Mennonite farmers along from Ind. for testimonials.

Tomatoes plentiful, prices 'rotten'

By DIETER KRIEG

THE BUCK - Tomato growers have an above average crop of tomatoes on their hands and are faced with "rotten" prices, according to B.S. Warfel and of B.S. Warfel and Sons, Inc., who heads a tomato brokerage firm here in southern Lancaster County. A broker with 44 years of experience in the business, Warfel flatly said "I never saw the market so depressed in my life."

We can buy more than what we want for 60 to 65 cents per ⅝ bushel basket (20 quarts) but can only place a limited amount at the canneries. Farmers with a contract have a limited home for their product but there's little demand for open market surpluses," the veteran tomato handler added.

Warfel, who at one time had seven tomato stations along the East Coast, claimed that affluence and welfare policies have much to do with the present squashed state of tomato prices and demand. Supply and demand determine prices.

"People are so affluent, they eat steak instead of tomato soup," Warfel quipped. Then he unabashedly opinionized that welfare programs which distribute the working man's money to those who don't work are partially responsible for the development.

The weak demand for tomatoes has developed in spite of the thousands of tons of fruits and vegetables which spoiled in California fields last month due to a strike. Farmers in the Golden State grow 87 per cent of the nation's tomato crop and canneries there last year hauled in three million more tons of the crop than they had originally counted on. The result has been that canning houses are working with surpluses and growers are faced with depressed prices. This strike and low price situation has prompted one California grower to open a 160-acre field of his tomatoes to the public free of charge, a California newspaper reported. Approximately 300 people showed up for the free harvest.

Warfel said he could only handle his own customers this year, due to the bigger than average crop and slow demand. His clients are scattered throughout several Pennsylvania and Maryland counties - as far as 75 miles away. Two Schuylkill County growers, among others, were delivering their tomatoes here while this reporter was visiting.

With the tomato season now in its peak, Warfel and Sons are shipping about 12 truck loads per day - or roughly 10,000 baskets. While that may sound like a lot, it is not, compared to the days when there was still a strong demand for tomatoes. "Years ago," Warfel recollected, "we hauled 40 to 60 truck loads per day during the peak of the season. Prices have changed too. Says Warfel: "You'd pay five cents per basket to pick'em and sold'em for 35 cents and up, per basket, delivered." He also noted that at that time (1932) there were 14 canning houses in Baltimore, compared to not a single one today.

Warfel ships his tomatoes in whatever way the various firms dictate: bulk, boxes, or basket. Trucks pick up the crop as far as 75 miles away and will deliver 500 to 600 miles away. Coreless tomatoes is what the canning houses are demanding nowadays, Warfel explained, pointing out that the Red Rock variety is one of the more popular.

The tomato picking season began during the first days of August and will continue throughout the Summer and Fall until frost arrives. So far there have been no significant problems. As much as 20 per cent of the fields may have been affected by blight, Warfel estimated, but that was more of a problem where spraying was neglected. Jim Ressler, who was in Warfel's office at the time, noted that the 40 acres of tomatoes he and his brother, Charles, work with at their farm near Rawlinsville, were sprayed five to six times - which works out to just about once every two weeks. The spraying program payed off, however, as Ressler acknowledged "very good" yields - "darn near twice that of last year." Blight problems were avoided by the Resslers.

Ressler believed that if it hadn't been for storm damage earlier in the year, his tomato crop would have been even better than the "very good" crop he's picking anyway.

Warfel described this year's tomato growing conditions as being too wet, a condition which some of the fruit to be damaged right on the vine.

Approximately 10,000 baskets of tomatoes are loaded daily at the B.S. Warfel and Sons tomato loading station, south of The Buck on Route 272.

BICENTENNIAL BYPATHS

On August 28, 1776, at Birmingham, England, refugee Samuel Curwen met a local quaker and "found him a sensible man and a warm American, as most of the middling classes are through the kingdom, as far as my experience reaches." Later in the day he talked to a merchant who had visited America and "is her steady and ardent advocate."

Family farm energy bill introduced

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Congressman Fred Richmond (D-N.Y.), a member of the House Agriculture Committee has introduced H.R. 15145, The Family Farm Energy Conversion Act with Congressman Jim Jeffords of Vermont and Congressman Bob Bergland of Minnesota. Similar legislation has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin and Senator George McGovern of South Dakota.

The legislation establishes a study of anaerobic digesters, which convert animal and vegetable waste materials into methane gas and fertilizer. Following the study, the Department of Agriculture would sponsor pilot demonstration projects on over 100 family farms throughout the United States.

Congressman Richmond stated: "The family farmer is threatened today by the rapidly rising prices of energy and chemicals. Utilization of the anaerobic digesters, also known as methane converters, will provide the farmer with a substitue for natural gas and propane. It will also yield fertilizer with a high nitrogen content.

Anaerobic digesters can attack today's three pronged problem of energy recovery, pollution control, and nutrient recycling.

We know this process works, because other countries such as France, India, Korea, Algeria, Hungary and South Africa are operating digesters right now. The problems are not with laboratory knowledge buty with hardware and management uncertainties. A strong demonstration program will help solve these."

Methane converters operate by a simple biological process. Living micro-organisms which are naturally present "digest" the organic waste, giving off methane gas. The residue is fertilizer, with up to 40 percent higher nitrogen content than before digestion.

The potential energy production is significant. If the manure of the 9 million head of cattle now in the feed lots were converted to gas, it would satisfy approximtely five percent of the United States' demand. The conversion would yield 360,000,000 cubic feet of methane gas each day.

The Family Farm Energy Conversion Act provides for a study of anaerobic digesters by the Soil Conservation Service in consultation with the National Bureau of Standards and the National Science Foundation. Farmers owning 640 acres or less would then participate in the field performance tests. Those models rated most effective and safe would be "certified." Farmers would be eligible for grants for the installation of certified models.

Rodeo action described

WOODSTOWN, N.J. — Again this week "Hector" the bull fighter displayed his talent during the bull riding. Hector and the bull finally came to a stand off, but not until the bull had claimed the first cape, and seemed to say 'I dare you to come and get your cape'. The bull riding was won by Abe Morris with a 69 marking, collecting $249.41, moving him into third place for the season with a total of $818.79.

The bareback riding was won by Jack Meli with a mark of 67. The calf ropers seemed to have a tough time with Bob Geer winning first with a 22.5 second time, collecting $155.32 for first place. Steer wrestling was rough and tumble with Tom Halikman throwing his steer in 10.5 seconds for $225.89.

Junior bull riding was an added attraction that all the younger cowboys have been waiting for. This event lets eight to 15 year olds try to ride the future bulls. Mike Michelek of Stumpy Lane, Pennsgrove won first place and his brother John won second place. These boys go to the pay window right along with the regular cowboys.

Joann Trost was first in the girls barrel racing with a fast time of 18.24, collecting $174.44, making her a total of $943.59 for the season, holding down third place.

There were 3142 spectators watching a total of 87 cowboys and cowgirls compete for a total of $2386.78.

In 1870 the U.S. population was 38,558,371. Today it is over 215 million!

Potato market weak

next week he expects the price to have dropped to 55 cents. He's optimistic, however, that rising export sales and cooler weather will reinforce prices in weeks to come.

Potato prices are about a dollar lower than a year ago, Wolf commented, due to the fact that most growers have good yields and there's been somewhat of a rush in marketing them. Potatoes for processing are bringing about $3.45 per hundredweight.

Wolf has been digging his crop since July 20. Favorable weather brought the crop out about a week or two early, he indicated. Another explanation he has for the present glut on the market is that the early varieties of potatoes were apparently overplanted.

Like with most other crops this year, growing conditions were favorable for potatoes.

Some growers in northern regions of the state had some portions of fields drowned, but other than that there are no significant problems being reported. There were some early reports of blight, but that didn't last too long due to the recent hot and dry weather.

Rates announced

WASHINGTON - County loan and purchase rates for 1976-crop corn as issued recently by the U.S. Department of Agriculture reflect the national average loan rate of $1.25 per bushel, an increase of 15 cents per bushel from 1975.

Adjustments were made to county loan rates to more nearly reflect area-to-area changes which have occurred in corn prices received by farmers and shifts in production weights.

The 1976-crop county loan rates are for corn grading No. 2, except for moisture.

Copies of the 1976-crop corn county loan rates, as applicable, are being sent to the state offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) and will also be available from the Grains, Oilseeds, and Cotton Division, ASCS, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Ag Progress shows advances

said Bresler, with the emphasis on 'real.'

With crowds estimated at between 8000 and 10,000 people for each of the two days of the show, visitors from all over Pennsylvania and nearby states were treated to machinery displays, plowing contests, the latest in Penn State research, and some entertainment.

The plowing contest had special significance for at least one Lancaster Countian, Harvey Sauder of New Holland R1 who took first place in the small plow division. That performance qualified him for the national plowing contest next year. This year's national contest was held here also, but Midwesterners dominated.

Another highlight of the show was the display of antique farm equipment — in sharp contrast to the modern variety on display, and deemed especially appropriate during this Bicentennial Year. The Ag Progress Days show is perennially billed as one of the largest shows of its kind in the East. Some of the old fashioned equipment was put to actual use as crowds looked on with keen interest, a bit of nostalgia, or both.

As pointed out by Bresler, the emphasis was on bigness: big tillage equipment, big combines, big tractors, and big forage harvesters. Harvesting machines included balers which produced either round or conventional rectangular bales; hay stackers; self-propelled three-row corn choppers, and four-row corn pickers.

Tillage equipment included discs, chisels, plows and combinations of these.

Spread over an area of about ten acres, the commercial exhibit space featured most anything a farmer might be interested in. Company representatives were on hand to explain their products and services. "Ag Progress" was the name of the show and all the evidence was here that it was aptly named.

Although displays and exhibits were pretty well confined to one area, the demonstrations of field equipment and research findings spread the show out far and wide beneath a sky which wrapped a burning sun in an unusually humid haze. A number of visitors commented on the hot and humid conditions they found in the serene Spruce Creek Valley, which is bordered on the south by the majestic Tussey Ridge.

Visitors traveled to the various research plots by wagon or bus. Penn State specialists were on hand to explain the projects and how they might apply to commercial conditions back home.

The latest in crop spraying equipment.

Dick Markle's steam tractor - a 1916 Case - drew some attention at Ag Progress Days. Markle is an equipment dealer in the State College area.

Plowing champions named

ROCK SPRINGS - Frank Kocevar from Dauphin County and Robert Miller of Millersburg picked up the most glory in the national plowing contest - winning the large and small plow divisions respectively. Kocevar's closest competitor was a 19-year old girl from Odell, Ill. who vows to keep coming back to the nationals until she wins.

The 73-year old Dauphin County dairyman was the heavy favorite in the plowing contest, and Pennsylvanians were delighted to see him win. Enthusiasm was highly evident, especially since the contest was so close.

Miller was the national winner in the small plow division, beating Lancaster County's Frank Burkart, who took third.

In addition to his first-place finish in the plowing contest, Kocevar was honored with safety, sportsmanship, and All-American Plowman awards, and he will have an opportunity to travel to Holland where the world plowing championships will be held.

This year's national plowing contest was held at the Penn State research farms, near here, in conjunction with the Ag Progress Days.

The 19-year old miss who almost beat Kocevar is Colleen Wolf, a computer student. She trailed the veteran plowman from Dauphin County by a score of 162.6 to 162.4. Kocevar has more than 50 years of experience behind the plow.

Equipment - whether modern or antique - was of interest to young and old visitors alike during the Bicentennial version of Ag Progress Days, held at Penn State's research farms with close to 10,000 people in attendance on each of the two days. Shown above is a German air-cooled diesel tractor.

Fulton Grange meets

Fulton Grange 66 met in regular session on August 23 with Master Thomas Galbreath presiding. The following legislation was acted upon:

It was voted to oppose Senate Bill 46 which would give the Secretary of Health broad powers in establishing rules and regulations in concurrence with the Advisory Board. These rules would be to establish and certify minimum standards for ambulance vehicles and equipment, for the training of ambulance technicians, for licensure of ambulance service, etc.; it was voted to support House Bill 219, which would prohibit the condemnation of prime agricultural land for highway purposes or for disposal of solid or liquid waste material unless a committee determines that there is no feasible or prudent alternative; and it was decided to oppose House Bill 2, which would provide for the election of senators to serve six years rather than the present four year term. The bill would also provide for election of members of the House of Representatives for four years rather than the present two-year term, and would reduce the number of members in the House of Representatives from the present 203 to 151.

The next meeting of the Grange, September 13, will be an election of officers. The 6th Degree will be presented in Berwick on October 16. National Grange will be held in Atlantic City in November.

Purchases up

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U. S. Department of Agriculture said recently that Japanese purchases of U.S. grains and soybeans in the 1975-76 marketing year will exceed by a million metric tons the quantities provided in the trade understanding agreed upon last summer by the Japanese Minister of Agriculture and Forestry, Mr. Shintaro Abe, and Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Bell announced that Japan's purchases of U.S. grain and soybeans for shipment in the 1975-76 marketing year total 15.3 million tons compared with 13.1 million tons the preceding year.

The Abe-Butz understanding of Aug. 12, 1975, calls for Japanese purchases of 14 million tons of U.S. grain and soybeans a year for a 3-year period beginning in the summer of 1975.

Mr. Bell said that "the Japanese performance during the first year of the understanding is good news for American farmers."

He said Japanese purchases are again expected to exceed 14 million tons in the 1976-77 marketing year just beginning. Japanese purchases of U.S. feed grains are expected to be higher than in 1975-76. Purchases of soybeans will be lower than this year, while wheat purchases will remain about the same.

THE GOOD WORD from the Bible

I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help.

My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth.

4-H citizen ambassador is glad to be American

By SALLY BAIR
Feature Writer

In this year of America's Bicentennial, Christine Erb discovered how glad she is to be an American. Chris spent the fourth of July in the Soviet Union taking a boat trip on the Moscow River and touring the Kremlin. She said, "When I came out, I was so glad I was an American. I never really appreciated home and my freedom."

Chris, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur N. Erb, Mount Joy R 1, was traveling with 36 other young Americans on a "4-H Citizen Ambassador" program which took them to nine countries in six weeks. The tour was sponsored by the National 4-H Club Foundation in Washington, D.C.

To Chris, it was a broadening educational experience, and one which made a lasting impact on her. The two countries which made the biggest impression on her were Holland, "where I really treasured my home stay," and Russia, because "it made me appreciate my home."

The group stopped in Russia first and spent a total of seven days touring Moscow and Leningrad. Chris remembers Moscow as being dark and drab, with "nothing colorful." She said, "The people hardly ever smile - it seemed so dull." The one thing which she enjoyed in Moscow was riding on their "metro" or subway. "It was one of the cleanest in Europe," she observed.

They also went to an amusement park, where she said people did seem to be having fun. When they asked their guide about riding on a roller coaster, he laughed and called them "American hills." But there was none.

Another interesting visit was to Lenin's tomb. After some confusion, Chris recalls, they got into the eight-block-long line waiting to see Lenin. She said the guards made them remove their hands from their pockets even though it was cold. They had to move in single file, quietly, and the guards watched them closely. They eventually saw Lenin, and Chris said it was a surprise to see the body there. That experience, she said, "reminded me of what I thought it would be like."

In contrast, she found Leningrad "totally different." She said it was "a little brighter," and she characterized the Winter Palace as being "gorgeous." She said the group didn't see any churches in Russia but she was surprised to see many beautiful Christian paintings in the Winter Palace.

All through her Russian stay she said, "I had this funny feeling that this was one place I didn't want to get stuck. And it didn't take long to form that impression."

Furthermore, she said that people who criticize our form of government should visit a country like the Soviet Union. "For those who think Communism is better, let them try it."

From rainy, drab Russia, the group moved on to the Netherlands which proved to be Chris's favorite country. It was hot and sunny in Holland, and Chris lived for three days with a family.

She said, "The people made me feel so welcome."

Her family had moved from Rotterdam to an old farm which featured a building in the northern European style of half-barn and half-house. Her host family had refinished the bulding and made the entire structure into a home. Chris said, "It was fabulous, old and nice. And I had the loft all to myself."

Her host father was a grain exporter who spent most of his time in Rotterdam. Her host mother had worked in the Netherlands Embassy in this country and spoke excellent English. There were three daughters, two of whom were married, and a 17-year-old at home.

Homestead Notes

Chris admired the knitwear available in England, and models two sweaters she purchased there.

About Holland Chris said, "I loved it. It was pret very clean. There were lots of trees and you cou through them to another row of trees." The Ame spent time touring with members of a Young Fa group. She was very impressed with a film described the process of reclaiming land from th and the visit to these "polders," or newly reclaimed Of course, she saw lots of dikes and they visited farm a cheese factory.

She was surprsied throughout Europe that she saw only twice. That corn "was a little sick looking," northern Europe was experiencing a bad drought, bu said the effects of the drought were not in evidence.

The drought did force the Americans to take a sponge baths, however, since several of the places stayed in were having a shortage of water.

Belgium and Germany reminded her most of her in Lancaster County. She said "They were pretty tries, and it just seemed like home. The people seemed just like here. It was simple, and not bustling."

In Belgium the group stayed in a convent, which fascinating to Chris. "We each had our own little roo every room there was a wash bowl and table. All Europe it was like that, and I think it's a good idea," said.

She also saw a demonstration of the dying art of lace, and bought a lovely tablecloth to help her remem it.

In Germany she stayed with a family too, bu countered a little difficulty. She and the other American girls could speak no German and the Ger hosts could speak no English. She said, "We did ta little - we used sign language."

In England, Chris stayed with a "very nice family" said they did a lot of talking and asking questions s "we didn't have a problem understanding the Br accent." There was a moment of concern, however, w her host mother announced they were having "fagg for supper. It turned out that they were merely meath but it caused great amusement.

In England they saw the Roman baths at Bath, musical "Jesus Christ Superstar", and toured Lon including the 650-step climb to the top of St. Pa Cathedral.

The three days in Paris were not among Chr favorite. She said it was "too fast moving for a cou girl like me." Nevertheless, she enjoyed visiting the No Dame Cathedral, and she said she really like the pastr "French rolls are really good."

Long walks and snow in the Alps in July were a highl of their visit to Switzerland. Chris observed that she wo like to go back and go skiing. They also visited a che factory and saw Swiss bells being made.

In Denmark the group stayed in a mission hotel visited Tivoli Gardens, which Chris said "seemed so sm compared to Hersheypark." They also got to see the ho of the Queen, Viking ships in a musuem and the home Hans Christian Andersen. From Denmark the gro made a one day ferry trip to Sweden.

Chris said the one thing she really missed during h travels was having fresh milk to drink. They drank mos soft drinks and occasionally got "American Champagne" which is water. She also learned to appreciate the fresh fruits and vegetables in abundance in this county.

Chris spent a lot of her free time looking for authentic items to help her remember her trip. In addition to her lovely Belgian lace, she has Delft from Holland, painted items and amber from Russia, a clock from Switzerland, sweaters from England, and a table full of other souvenirs.

She feels the trip might have changed her a little. She said, "I didn't find any great differences, I don't think. The people seem about the same. Even though it made me think more, I'm still the same."

"I'm ready to go back. I could go tomorrow, even today if possible," she continues. The next time she goes, Chris says she'd like to take more time and not travel so quickly. She said, "It was really fast-moving. I could hardly believe we were home." Chris's mother said, "I fell it was well worthwhile for her."

A 4-H'er for 10 years, Chris is the first from Lancaster to participate in the 4-H Citizen Ambassador program, and she is one of six from Pennsylvania who were accepted. She said she would recommend the program to others. She paid the cost of the program herself, and said she really feels it helped her get more out of it, because, "I worked for it."

Part of the adventure was getting to know the other Americans on the trip, including young people from Texas, South Carolina, and Alabama. And Chris is already preparing to share her travels with others through a slide presentation.

Chris is working again at her job at Weis markets, but the memories of her trip are still a large part of her life. She says, "I'm going again. If I speak positively, then I really might get there."

So the memories linger and become dearer. For Chris the trip has meant a new awareness and a new dimension to her life. It is also the beginning of dreaming and planning for the next journey in international living.

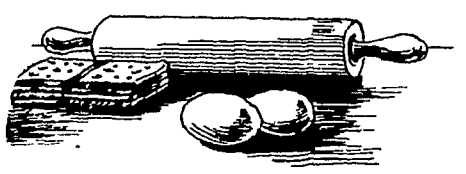
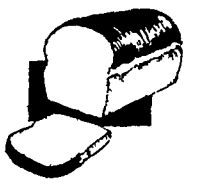
Home on The Range





The recent request for candy and funnel cake recipes brought a tremendous response from "Home on the Range" readers. While there were many more recipes that came in for the candy, some were identical, so only one of each could be printed. The same instance occurred for the funnel cake. Instead of just forwarding these recipes to the readers who requested them, Lancaster Farming is printing them for all to enjoy.

Two other timely requests have come into Lancaster Farming since the last publication. One reader would like to know if anyone has a recipe for Tomato Catsup which tastes as good as catsup bought in the store. As she puts it, "I think store bought is so much better, so I wish I could make it so it would taste the same." Maybe someone can help her.

Another would like a homemade rootbeer recipe not using bottled mix.

The rest of this week's recipes are home-tested corn recipes. Possibly they will give some new twists on preparing this delicious vegetable.

Funnel Cake

two-thirds cups milk
1 egg
1¼ cup flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Beat milk with egg. Blend flour with sugar, baking powder, and salt. Blend all together to form batter. Holding finger over bottom of a funnel (½ inch hole or less), fill funnel with batter. Holding funnel as near to fat as possible, remove finger and drop batter into deep fat heated to 375 degrees F using a circular movement from center outward to form a special cake about 3 inches in diameter. Immediately replace finger. Then form another cake. Fry until puffy and golden brown, turning once. Remove with slotted spoon to absorbent paper. Sift 4X sugar over cakes, or drizzle with molasses. Serve at once.

Fresh Corn on the Cob

Remove husks from fresh corn. Remove silk with a stiff brush. Place each ear on a piece of aluminum foil. Spread corn liberally with soft butter or margarine and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Wrap aluminum foil securely around each ear of corn - don't seal seam, but fold or twist foil around ends (that way corn will roast instead of steam). Place on grill and roast over hot coals 15 to 20 minutes or until corn is tender, turning ear frequently. Use extra butter, salt, and freshly ground pepper or a variety of whipped butter flavored with horseradish, anise, or herbs.

Anise Butter:

Soften one teaspoon anise seed in one teaspoon boiling water for 30 minutes. Add both anise seed and water to ½ cup slightly soft butter or margarine. Beat with electric mixer or wooden spoon till fluffy.

Don't raw pack squash

UNIVERSITY PARK - The practice of packing uncooked summer squash into jars to be canned at home is not recommended. However, you will still find such directions in canning books published by some lid manufacturers and in older canning books.

Raw packing squash to be canned is not recommended because the tissue cells of squash contain excessive amounts of air. When jars of raw packed squash are processed in a pressure canner–the safest way to process vegetables--this large amount of air must escape. As the air escapes through the interface of a regular two-piece metal self-sealing lid, it takes food with it, particularly seeds in the case of squash.

Therefore, it is much more likely that lids will not seal because food will be entrapped in the lid interface. And excessive liquid will be lost from the canned product whether or not it seals.

When canning summer squash at home, follow this procedure using the hot pack method:

Wash but do not pare. Trim ends. Cut into ½-inch slices; halve or quarter to make pieces of uniform size. Add just enough water to cover and bring to a boil.

Pack hot in jars loosely to ½ inch of top. Add one teaspoon salt per quart. Add boiling hot cooking liquid to ½-inch of top. Add and adjust lids. Process in pressure canner at 10 pounds pressure. Process 30 minutes for pints; 40 minutes for quarts.

For other information on preservation of fruits and vegetables, contact your county extension service.

Sewers compete

TIMONIUM, Md. - Thursday evening, September 2, will be an important night for Maryland 4-H sewers. At that time the state 4-H Fashion Revue will have its annual run at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium. Admission is free, and the public is invited.

This year's theme is "The Way We Were," and should feature fewer pantsuits and more long dresses and coat-and-dress ensembles than in the past five years or more.

In total, there will be 46 contestants, representing 23 counties in the state, plus Baltimore. This year will also mark the first appearance in the event by a Baltimore inner-city teenager.

The winner will receive an expense-paid trip to participate in U. S. competition and a chance for college scholarships during the National 4-H Club Congress, set for Nov. 30 - Dec. 4 at Chicago, Ill.

The revue begins at 8 p.m. in the horse pavillion at the south end of the racetrack on the state fairground.

Vicki Sherick is poultry queen

Judy Stoltzfus, last year's poultry queen places the tiara on her successor, Vicki Sherick.

By JOANNE SPAHR

LANCASTER - The competition was stiff last Friday night at the second annual Lancaster County Poultry Queen contest, held at the Farm and Home Center, here but a tremendous amount of poise and a working knowledge of life on a poultry farm were two of the attributes which landed Vicki Sherick this year's title.

The 20-year-old, 5'11" emerald-eyed queen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sherick, Willow Street R1. The Shericks own a 35,000 pullet raising operation and grow 40 acres of corn. They also raise a few steers.

"So far, I've only seen the work involved with a poultry operation," grinned the princess, "maybe now I'll see the glamourous part of it."

As a person who "basically likes to meet people," Vicki should have her work cut out for her. As princess, she will appear in parades, be a guest at the Lancaster County Poultry Association's annual banquet, and represent the County in the state pageant in October. She will also promote the industry in general, with one specific duty already assigned to her - she will appear during the week of October 13 - 18 as the Poultry Federation's representative at the agriculture promotion to be held in Park City shopping mall.

"It should be fun," quipped Vicki, who is presently a junior at Penn State University majoring in nursing.

As part of the competition, Vicki answered questions relating to herself and the industry. She explained that her ambition to be a nurse comes from a desire to help others, especially in a time of stress, such as during an illness. She also told the audience of approximately 60 that she enjoys singing, and is a soloist in several area churchs and also sings with the Penn State Concert Choir.

As with all other five candidates, she had a choice of answering one of three industry questions. She took up the challenge of explaining why chicken is so inexpensive today as compared to the past when it was considered a luxury item. True to form, she confidently and expertly explained that mechanization is a major factor in the turn around.

Master of ceremonies for this year's event was John Hoffman, president of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation. Speaker for the evening was Jay Irwin, county agent at the Penn State extension office. He stressed the importance of raising poultry, explaining that it comprises one-third of the state's industry. He also pointed up the need for a strong public relations effort on the part of the farmer.

Judy Stoltzfus, outgoing queen, also addressed the group, telling of some of her experiences in her year's reign.

Judges for the evening's festivities were Renee Witmer, Robert Montgomery from WGCB FM radio, and Joan Rohrer.

As a gift for being named the 1976 poultry queen, Vicki received a piece of luggage.

Dauphin Co. Society 1

The Dauphin County Society of Farm Women Group 1 held its monthly meeting on August 10. The group met in Historic Strasburg at 6 p.m. for a delightful dinner. This was the group's night - out and 29 members and guests attended. Following dinner the group attended the Sight And Sound Showcase to see "A Land of Our Own". This show portrayed the country from the covered wagon of yesterday to the jetliners of today. The pictures were really breath - taking.

The next meeting of the society will be held on September 8, at 7:30 p.m. at the Sand Hill Lion's Club Building. Hostess will be Kathy Moffatt and co - hostess will be Barbara Fisher.

• Decorate your place settings with baler twine

By JOANNE SPAHR

Baler twine is great stuff. Everyone knows that right now during the summer months, a farmer couldn't be without it, and also if it weren't in the barn all year round, farm children would not have jump ropes to play with or strings to entice little kittens to chase. But has anyone ever thought of a use which a farm wife can put it to? Now they have.

One of Lancaster Farming's readers says she uses it in decorating her table for guests. Actually, this is not as strange as it may sound. One of her hobbies is making napkin holders which look like miniature birds' nests. To do this, she uses the hemp to make the nests and glues them onto bobby pin clips. Then, when her table is set, including napkins, she clips the holders onto the napkins and gives her table the pretty added extra it needs.

The process of making these attractive little holders is uncomplicated, and if you have the twine in the barn, the cost is only about 40 cents per holder.

MATERIALS

The materials needed are mostly things found around the house and farm. The basics are baler twine, white glue, straight pins with colored heads, bobby pin-clips, a rose leaf in velvet, a paper 1½ inch bird, and artificial moss.

Tiny bird's nest napkin holders can accent a table setting to give it a dainty touch.

PROCEDURE

To begin making the napkin holders, dye the twine brown with a combination of strong coffee and a drop of black shoe polish. The next step is to cut the rope into 24-inch pieces and take the twine apart strand by strand. Then, wrap about eight strands around your index finger, applying white glue as you wrap. This glue will dry clear and will hold the strands together when dry.

While the hemp is still wrapped around your forefinger, slide the top part of the clip firmly between the strands. Inserting the clip should always be done when the twine is damp, so the rope gives easily and the task is easier to do.

To cover the bobby pin clip which will show under the circle of twine, glue artificial moss onto the inside of the "bird's nest" over the metal.

The protruding hinge of the clip will also need to be covered. This can be camouflaged by gluing the velvet leaf on top of it.

At this point, the basic nest is done. However, a few extras have to be added to make it look more real and eye catching.

To decorate it with little "bird's eggs," take the pins with the colored heads and using a wire cutter, clip off the majority of the straight pin. Then, place the remaining pin into the nest, using the colored heads as "eggs."

The only step remaining is to glue the paper bird onto the nest and clip it onto the napkin.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The other week I attended a Mother's Tea which my daughter's 4-H Sewing Club held as their final meeting. It was a pleasant affair with each child showing the garment she had made during the summer. This was followed by a musical program where the youngsters could display their talents and entertain the parents.

The one thing that has changed in this Mother's Tea "affair", from 15 years ago when my oldest daughter invited me, is the way in which the mothers dress. No longer do we put on our best hat and wear white gloves. We simply wear a pretty dress or slacks and sip punch and eat cookies in complete comfort. Some things have changed for the better.

xxx

As we near round-up of the projects in our 4-H Community Club, I am again impressed by the important part that parents play in having a child complete an undertaking. An eight, ten, or 12-year-old simply doesn't carry through unless someone lends a helping hand or prods occasionaly. I speak from experience. They also need someone to provide transportation to the meetings in order to hold their interest.

As a leader, to reconcile oneself to the effort put forth and the resulting achievements, one must look at the shining eyes of those who do finish and win a ribbon. There are always those shy and quiet ones who become just a bit more sure of their own ability as a result of accomplishing what they set out to do.

Berks Co. Society 6

The Berks County Society of Farm Women, Group 6, held their August 17, meeting at the home of Mrs. David Bauer, Oley, R1. Sixteen members and eight guests attended the meeting.

The speaker for the evening was Dr. Irving Jones, a specialist at the Reading Rehabilitation Center. He spoke to the group about the heart, its functions, and how to avoid heart failures.

There will be a special meeting for the group in two weeks on Tuesday, August 31, at the home of Mrs. Richard Schlegel, Boyertown, R3, at 8 p.m.

The September meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Roger Wagner, Oley, R1, Tuesday, September 21, at 8 p.m. Cancer pads will be made.

Twelve members plan to attend the county convention, on October 2, at the Berks Ag. Center in Bern Township. Mrs. Steve Fisher, Mrs. David Hauseman, and Mrs. Merrill Hetrick volunteered to serve at the coffee and tea hour at the county convention.

Date changed

The Elizabethtown Marketplace Fair, Elizabethtown, will be held on September 28 through October 2, and not earlier in the month as had been publicized previously.

Peachilicious Weekend packed with peachy pleasure

GATCHELLVILLE - With the end of the peach harvest season fast approaching, Maple Lawn Farms, New Park, Pa., near Gatchellville, will host its second annual PEACHILICIOUS LABOR DAY WEEKEND for area residents in south central Pennsylvania and northern Maryland, September 4, 5, and 6 from noon to 6 p.m. daily. A kaleidescope of peach foods and peach crafts will highlight the three day event on the site of the spring Peach Blossom Festival at the farm of Paul McPherson, 1976 president of National Peach Council.

"Normally the peach season in this part of the country extends into mid-September," states the peach producer. "But this year the crop has run two to three weeks ahead of schedule. While this harvest festival is normally planned to hit the peak of the season, this year's happening will just about run into the end of peach season for the whole North East peach producing states. In other words, this will be the last chance for local consumers to capture the goodness of the fresh peach in 1976."

Farm wife Gail McPherson, coordinator for the Peachilicious Weekend has announced the peachy menu available to festival attendees to be prepared by non-profit organizations and cooks at the farm.

The menu includes a daily pig roast coming off the spit at 2 p.m. to be served with broiled peach halves, peachy hot dogs smothered in spiced peach sauce, peach pies, peach shortcake, and make-your-own ice cream sundaes with three flavors of homemade ice cream and peach punch.

The York County Pork Producers will supervise the pork roast. Manning the hot dog concession will be Tom Wallace with Boy Scout Troop No. 468, and Maryland Line United Methodist Church. Delta Fire Co. Ladies Auxilary will provide baked goods with Maple Lawn Farms on the ice cream and punch end.

A main attraction will be a 12-quilt auction, Monday at 2 p.m. for benefit of the York County 4-H Center. Women from York County Society of Farm Women's Groups, Red Land Homemakers Group, and Davidsburg 4-H Club have made the quilts for the public auction. They will be on display Saturday and Sunday from noon to 6 p.m. before going on the auction block Monday with other crafts in the Peachilicious Barn at the festival. The auctioneer will be Blain Rentzel.

The quilts include: "Cathedral Window" made by Farm Women Group No. 1; "Nine Patch," an old fashioned pattern made from scraps of new material and unbleached muslin by Group No. 4; "Ocean Wave," another old design from Group No. 8; "Nine Patch with Farm Women's emblem," in pastel shades by Group No. 11; "Wreath Rose," an applique design by Group No. 17.

Also "Trip Around the World," a patchwork by Group No. 25; "Bicentennial," a golden eagle applique in the center of patchwork by Group No. 26; "Butterfly," an applique by Group No. 27; "Americana," a red and blue cross stitch on white, which won first prize in the East Berlin Senior Citizen Quilt Show made by Groups No. 1, 6 and 26; "Granny Nine Patch," an old fashioned color and design pattern by Groups No. 1, 6, and 26; "Bicentennial," red and white stripe with separate pillow cover by Red Land Homemakers; and "Bicentennial," red, white and blue combination of cross stitch and patchwork by Davidsburg 4-H Club.

In addition to the quilt display and auction, 17 craftsmen are booked to show and sell their wares which include peach oriented crafts: Coin dealer John Wagner with framed peaches; doll maker Edith McDonald with peach pin cushions and dolls in minature peach crates; sewer Willabelle Lowe with peach hot pads; plant specialists from D & H Greenhouse with peach scented geraniums; jewelry makers, the Kermit Stongs with peach earrings; crocheting expert Blanche DeVoe with peach colored items; leather craftsman Gloria Lindburg with peach key chains; leaded glass makers, the Lloyd Altlands with glass peaches and peach trees, and candlemakers with candles by Mark peach scents.

Plus Benjamin Riedel with refrigerator magnets celebrating the peach; Elsie Grasser with peach crocheting; Ann Fry with peach and bees wax candles; The J. My Thoughts and Welcome to Them

(With apologies to James Thurber)

The quiet has a different feel

By JOANNE SPAHR

Just a quick note in passing This morning when I left the house to come to work, it was still dark outside and a thick fog had settled over the farm. As I stepped outside the door, the first general feeling to pass over my senses was one of inner quietude. The crickets were chirping and the whole world was still and close to me I stopped and sighed - all was right with the world.

Then, I made my way to the car. And, I stopped short Where was it? Where had it gone to? I always park it right outside the house in the lane so that I have easy access to it whenever I need it. For just a minute, my heart started throbbing and my stomach tensed up Then I remembered. Dad sometimes parks it under the forebay.

Unabashedly, I headed out into the darkness to find it. As I walked, I felt only a small amount of fear Life was so peaceful and calm that I felt safe no harm would come to me.

As I walked, I thought over my feelings. My first reaction of panic at not seeing the car was a left-over from college days in the city, I thought at first Then I realized it was also a mixture of feelings stemming out of a new environment The town is slowly encroaching upon us, and people are suddenly everywhere the eye can see No longer are we in a secluded area or "in the sticks" like we used to be Anymore, it really isn't as safe as it used to be to walk alone at night or to let your car or implements setting out

So, although I know the importance of urban growth, I still find it hard to reconcile the way it is disrupting my memories of farm life and throwing a little fear into my mind when I walk alone at night or don't see my car right away.

However, I know I'm still fortunate. No matter what happens, I'll always have the feeling of being in the arms of nature when I walk outside in the early morning or late at night because I live on a farm.

Kerstetter warns of con men

HARRISBURG - Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Raymond J. Kerstetter and Mrs. Nancy L. Henry, secretary of the Pennsylvania Securities Commission, are cautioning farmers to beware of "phony" promoters of farm cooperatives.

Kerstetter said reports are circulating around the country of con men getting farm people to invest their savings in spurious cooperatives, promising returns on their investments and the right to purchase goods and services at reduced rates. "Then, the next day these promoters have disappeared," said Kerstetter.

Mrs. Henry urged anyone solicited by suspicious promoters to contact the Pennsylvania Securities Commission, Room 471 Education Building, Harrisburg, Pa. 17120, (717) 787-8061.

Mrs. Henry explained that cooperative programs require registration under the Pennsylvania Securities Act of 1972.

"Failure to register these programs may constitute violations of the Pennsylvania Securities Act," she said, adding that "at present, no such programs have been registered."

The Commission has been in contact with securities departments of other states, exchanging information on fraudulent cooperative schemes.

Promoters of these schemes frequently have histories of previous securities violations, many of which had occurred in Pennsylvania.

"The Commission is aware," said Mrs. Henry, "that residents of Alabama, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Wisconsin, Missouri, Arkansas, Illinois, Virginia, and Texas have been contacted by promoters or their representatives."

She said these promoters "are going from state to state in a 'blitz' campaign to set up a sales force to sell 'interests' in an agricultural cooperative wherein the farmer will not only receive investment return, but also the right to purchase goods, services, and products at a reduced rate for use in conducting his agricultural business."

The security frauds that have occurred in other states have resulted in the loss of vast amounts of investors' funds.

LIFE on the farm

By DIETER KRIEG

A large paper sack, which was once filled with 50 pounds of fluffy beet pulp, is almost big enough to envelope a man from shoulders to knees. Every year at about this time I used to do just that.

By cutting a hole in each corner and another in the center of the closed end of the bag, it made pretty good "coveralls." Ordinary clothing was too good for this job, no matter what sort of sad shape they were in. This was also the time to pick out the most worthless hat on the rack, and a pair of sneakers or shoes which you weren't trying to impress anyone with.

The last step in preparing for the upcoming chore involved little more than a good sense of humor and a few wrinkled facial expressions A joke or two was in order at about the time I "admired" my path from down below. Then came the first few steps upwards and daylight became a little dimmer. Another smart remark or two followed — and they always dramatized the situation to be a whole lot worse than it really was. The words and expressions were all in fun as we tried to make an unpleasant job into something we could joke about.

After a few steps into the chute of the silo, the bag over my body had an entire population of spiders running over it. The higher I went, the more spiders I disturbed. Broken, dusty webs "decorated" my disposable "robe."

The silo had been empty for a couple of months and in that time the spiders had taken over. Spiders always seem to do that when something is not in use regularly Now it was time to prepare the tall cylindrical structure for filling with several hundred tons of corn silage. My job was to make sure doors were closed properly and to lift the distributor into place.

The open doors were slammed into place and a hollow sound reverberated within the towering silo. Some hinges cringed and some doors didn't fit very well due to an accumulation of debris A pocket knife was used to scrape the edges of the concrete. The job required more than a few minutes' work

Invariably I would always pick a cool day for this chore, for hot weather was definitely disagreeable in this situation The air was confined within this narrow chute and the "insulation" I had wrapped myself in wasn't at all comfortable By the time I had reached the top and my head was just inches beneath the aluminum canopy, sweat would begin to roll down my arms, legs and face But the toughest part was yet to come

Down below and inside the silo was the silage distributor — a bulky metal contraption which deflects incoming materials to the wall of the silo in an even pattern It weighed close to 100 pounds and had to be pulled into position some 55 feet above the concrete floor That ordeal will be the next topic of Life on the Farm

Brian Ruch of New Ring gold R2 is shown with his grand champion market steer. The 1105 pound cross was also the champion heavyweight in the 4-H and vocational market steer show.

READ THIS BEFORE YOU BUY A USED CORN PICKER

If you've been thinking about buying a corn picker, you ought to know what you don't get with a used one

☐ First off, you don't get that much savings, if you can find a used corn picker that's reportedly in good condition, you'll pay upwards of 70% of the cost of a brand new Superpicker from New Idea

☐ You don't get a picker—necessarily—that's engineered and built for today's bigger fields, bigger yields.

☐ You don't get the close-by assistance from the highly-qualified New Idea Dealer in your area

☐ You don't get New Idea's full-year warranty.

☐ And, if that used picker breaks down during your harvest, you don't get much peace of mind. Instead you get a machine in pieces, and a crop that doesn't get harvested as it should, when it should

If on the other hand, you want to get your crop harvested with the least hassle—or none at all—forget about buying a used picker and talk to your New Idea Dealer about the new Superpickers

You can get our one-row Superpicker with a 6-roll husking bed, or with a snapper/elevator for harvesting ears husk-on And our two-row Superpickers, that let you pick wide or narrow rows, work with a 12-roll husking bed or with a field sheller. There's a whole catalog filled with other Superpicker features you'll want to know about; see it at your New Idea Dealer. Remember .think new, it's the most profitable thing for you to do.

About Safe Food Storage

Take a closer look at your kitchen. Sure, it may be clean - but is it safe? Clean is just not good enough. To prevent food poisoning, it's important that your kitchen not only be clean - but safe as well.

Germs and bacteria, which cause food-borne illness, are so small that they cannot be seen without the use of a high-powered microscope. However, you can prevent the growth of these germs by taking proper precautions in the storage of food in the kitchen. Besides that, safe food storage is easy.

Safety starts with cleanliness. Make sure all cupboards, shelves, and drawers which contain food are washed regularly. Always remember to wipe off the lid of a can or jar before opening it. This removes dust particles which could fall onto the food and possibly contaminate it.

There are three basic methods of food storage: shelf storage, refrigeration, and freezing. Each method calls for special handling to avoid food contamination.

Shelf Storage: Check under your kitchen sink and take inventory. One bag of potatoes, a couple of sponges, six onions, some cleanser, a can of tomato juice . . . Stop there. Three of those items don't belong - the potatoes, the onions, and the can of tomato juice. Don't store fresh produce or canned goods beneath your kitchen sink. Leakage from water and drainage pipes can damage food products. Cans may rust and deteriorate, providing a feast for growing germs. Never store food items next to potent household chemicals.

Avoid storing food products directly above a heat source, such as your oven or range. Instead, use these shelves for dinnerware or glasses. Food is sensitive to heat and should be stored in a cool, dry place.

Check your canned goods carefully for bulges, leaks or weak seams - warning signals for possible food poisoning. If you find such cans, that were recently purchased, in your kitchen, return them immediately to the store where they were bought. Under no circumstances taste the contents.

Refrigeration: Move over to your refrigerator. Is it a safe place to store food? The growth of bacteria and germs is inhibited when food is held at 40 degrees F. or lower. Take a periodic temperature reading by setting a thermometer on the center shelf of your refrigerator. Leave it there an hour or so. If it reads over 40 degrees F., set your refrigerator at a colder setting.

During the summer months, the refrigerator is popular with hungry, thirsty kinds. Frequent opening of the refrigerator door lets warm air rush in and alter the temperature.

Leftovers needs special consideration. They should be refrigerated immediately after dinner. Cooked meat and poultry left out at room temperature for two hours or more promotes the growth of bacteria and germs.

If you decide to make a spaghetti sauce the night before you serve it, don't put that full pot of sauce in the refrigerator. Instead, store your sauce in small, shallow containers. Refrigerating food in large quantities can be dangerous. It may be hours before the sauce in the center of the pot reaches 40 degrees F.

Freezing: Open the freezer door. Has frost accumulated to ¼ inch or more? If so, it may not be cold enough to keep your food thoroughly frozen. Ice which builds up on the panels may prevent the door from closing and allow warm air to enter the compartment. Partial thawing may result.

Freezing stops the growth of germs but it does not kill them. For most effective storage, a temperature of 0 degrees F. or lower should be maintained. Take a temperature reading periodically to check the accuracy of your unit.

When freezing, remember to wrap your meat and poultry in an air-tight, moisture-resistant wrap such as aluminum foil or freezer wrap. Carefully label each package. Indicate the type of cut, number of pieces, and date of purchase. Arrange your freezer so that the most recent purchases are packed in the rear of the compartment.

If you suspect any food you just purchased to be spoiled - when it smells or looks funny - Don't Taste It! Take it back to the grocery store where you bought it.

With these tips in mind, can you make your kitchen a safe place in which to store food? Just remember to keep food clean and stored in the proper place.

Berks Co. Report

KUTZTOWN - Throughout the week of August 16, the show ring at the Kutztown Fair was seldom vacant as young people put their animals through their paces in a number of livestock shows. The Berks County round-up was held simultaneously along with the combined 4-H and FFA events open to youth from all counties.

Space and schedules were rearranged to accommodate the large numbers of sheep and swine exhibited, with the sheep taking first occupancy in Tuesday's events. The blocking and grooming show began the festivities.

David Ernst took first place in the junior division of that contest, followed by Sarah Fretz and Andrew MacKay. In the senior division, Sherril Klahold took the number one spot backed up by Gail Snyder and Charles Hopkins.

Sherril Klahold came in for a handful of honors in the showing and fitting events, including grand champion fitter in the open youth contest as well as Berks County 4-H senior champion fitter and reserve senior champion showman. In the open show the Bernville 4-H'er also exhibited the first place Dorset ewe in the two-year-old and-over class.

The Berks County senior 4-H champion showman, Anne E. Holcombe, was also named grand champion showman in the open competition. Sarah Fretz was reserve grand champion showman in the same event, and Gail Snyder was the reserve champion fitter.

Darlene Klahold was the Berks County 4-H senior reserve champion showman and junior 4-H winners were as follows: junior champion fitter, Philip Klahold; reserve junior champion fitter, Melissa Holland; junior champion showman, Valarie L. Ernst; and reserve junior champion showman, David Ernst.

Following is a summary of the open youth sheep breed contests.

OPEN SHEEP CONTEST

In the Cheviot breed, the champion ewe was a two-year-old entered by Anne Katner, Pottsville, and the reserve champion ewe was a

CAN
IM-PRUV-ALL
SILAGE MAKE YOU
MONEY?

Since silage is superior to dry feeds in TDN per acre, the farmer can expect higher dollar yields from his silage. The increased TDN in silage means the farmer can feed more cattle with the same crop. He can produce more beef, more milk, and of course more dollars. But there are some dangers. Not all silage is the same. The farmer who wants to make sure that he makes more money with silage must make excellent silage. To insure consistent silage, he NEEDS our fermentation formulas.

The Oak Ridge Boys, a gospel group with a sound of country and rock combined, will be appearing at the Shindig at Cripple Creek on September 4. Long criticized for their mod clothes, medallions, and shoulder-length hair, the group has been termed gospel music's rebels. Yet, their successes in show business are many. They have won two grammies, nine Doves, and have performed on the Mike Douglas Show and Hee Haw. Additionally, they were featured in Canada last year on CBC-TV network. To add to their strengths, they have made these strides forward strictly on the basis of being a self-contained unit of performers. With all this behind them, the gospel music world is beginning to accept them as rebels — with a cause.

The champion pair was shown by Leslie Lazarus of Whitehall, and they were purchased by Marsteller Meats of Wescosville for $.70 a pound.

Fifteen Lehigh County 4-H Swine Club members exhibited 54 hogs and competed in a fitting and showmanship contest. Timothy Billig of New Tripoli was first place senior fitter and first place senior showman. Seth Gruber was first place junior fitter and Leslie Lazarus was first place junior showman. Delaware's Dairy Princess — Cathy Biggs.

Among those congratulating Delaware's dairy princess were Governor Sherman W. Tribbitt.

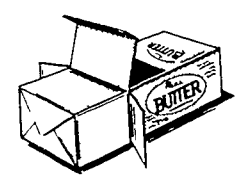
Delaware dairy princess crowned

NEWARK, Del. - Delaware's newest Dairy Princess is a perky seventeen-year-old Felton resident who will be attending Salisbury (Md.) State College this fall. Cathy Biggs was crowned by Governor Sherman W. Tribbitt during recent dairy industry ceremonies at the State Fair in Harrington.

As Delaware Dairy Princess, Cathy will represent the industry at various state dairy events throughout the year. She will also make some radio and television appearances.

The state-wide contest was sponsored by the Delaware Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA). The event is part of their program to promote milk products and publicize the dairy industry throughout the state. The contest is open to single women between 16 and 21 who are sponsored by a 4-H Club or a Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapter, or who are daughters of active dairymen. Cathy's family has a herd of about 90 Holsteins on their farm near Felton.

The new princess is a graduate of Lake Forest High School. This summer she is working as a counselor at Camp Lenape, a day camp for orthopedically handicapped children. In college she plans to major in psychology. In addition to her title, Cathy receives a $300 check which she plans to use on her education.



Slide series available

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - The American Hereford Association in cooperation with its youth affiliate, the American Junior Hereford Association, have announced the availability of a new Hereford showmanship slide series designed for use as demonstration or classroom instruction material for 4-H, FFA, and other interested beef groups.

The complete set consists of 80 color slides depicting actual showmanship procedure beginning with the first stages of dressing the animal and carrying through to the judge's showring decision. Also included is a 25-minute cassette tape with narration corresponding to each slide. The series is designed for use with a standard slide projector and cassette tape recorder, eliminating the need for special viewing equipment, although it can also be used in an automatic audio-visual slide projector.

Groups desiring to obtain one of the showmanship sets can make arrangements to secure them on a loan basis by contacting the AHA Junior Department in Kansas City and indicating the date they would like to use them. Those interested in purchasing a set of their own may do so, at cost, by remitting $20 with their request for the series.

More power to you!

Fidelity engineers don't think in terms of years of performance. They think in decades. They know farmers might need emergency electric power—today—tomorrow—or twenty years from tomorrow. And when they need it—they really need it. That's why Fidelity engineers are so careful in designing extra life into every Fidelity alternator and component.

Which all adds up to standby power people can depend on—year after year after year. To find out more about Fidelity PTO alternators, write Fidelity Electric Company, 328 North Arch Street, Lancaster, PA 17604. (717)397-8231.

ASA farm legislation stand stated

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The American Soybean Association's (ASA) position on 1977 farm legislation was outlined here in a speech by ASA President Seymour Johnson.

The cornerstone of ASA's position, he said, is freedom — "the freedom to plant as much or as little as each individual farmer wishes, the freedom to market his crop anywhere and anytime he wishes, and freedom from undue government interference in the marketplace."

Calling soybeans a model of free enterprise in the United States, Johnson pointed out that they have become the top crop in the nation in terms of cash income to the farmer and cash income to the nation through exports.

Regarding a government loan program for soybeans, he said ASA favors a loan level just high enough to ensure farmers against economic disaster, but not so high as to encourage stockbuilding and excessive production in the U.S. and abroad.

Johnson added that he personally feels the loan program should be abandoned if the government begins using it as an instrument to get soybeans into a government-held reserve program.

The loan level should reflect at least the variable cost of producing soybeans, he said, and a reseal program should be available. He also urged that ASA be consulted before a loan level is established.

Johnson said ASA strongly opposes the inclusion of soybeans in a U.S. government-held strategic grain reserve.

Johnson further stated that if government stocks existed, the market would interpret every government-owned bushel as excess and would react accordingly by bidding less for soybeans.

On export controls, Johnson said ASA believes such restrictions should be imposed only in case of a declared national emergency.

The ASA president said his association also recommends increased appropriations for soybean research; more funding for USDA Foreign Agricultural Service market development programs, and a halt to U.S. government subsidization of foreign products that compete with soybeans in world export markets.

Quarantines reduced

NEW YORK, N.Y. — State nd federal hog cholera uarantines were lifted from hode Island, New Hamphire and four western ounties of Massachusetts - erkshire, Franklin, ampshire and Hampden - he U. S. Department of griculture announced.

The actions remove restrictions imposed July 20 on the movement of swine from those areas both within the states and in interstate commerce, officials of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) said.

All the other counties in Massachusetts remain under quarantine for hog cholera. Under such quarantines swine may move to slaughter only under a permit from state or federal animal health officials.

Cooperative ups payment time

SYRACUSE, N.Y. - Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative has proposed to improve by three days the time of final payment for milk to dairy farmers under the New York-New Jersey Federal and State milk marketing orders.

The moving up of final payment could have a beneficial impact upon the financial picture of approximately 20,000 dairymen and the overall economy within major milk producing areas of the Northeast, stated Eastern's president Arden Tewksbury.

These areas depend heavily upon the income of milk producers, noted Tewksbury. This earlier milk check means a reduction in interest payments for producers with loans and time payments on purchases. It also places millions of dollars into the areas' economy sooner, allowing for quicker investment for larger returns, Tewksbury commented.

In a petition filed on August 6, and ratified by the cooperative's Board of Directors on August 18, Eastern proposed to amend the dead-line by which milk handlers must pay producers and cooperative handlers under the orders.

The petition also calls for the adoption of provisions requiring partial (advance) payments by handlers similar to those incorporated in nearly all other Federal milk marketing orders.

The orders currently state payments at the uniform price made directly to producers, or to cooperative associations acting only as marketing agents for their members, must be made on or before the 25th of the month following that in which the milk was delivered. Eastern's proposal requires final payment to producers directly on or before the 22nd day of the month.

Eastern also proposed that the New York-New Jersey orders require handlers to make partial payments for milk they purchase during the first 15 days of each month. Such payments would be due on or before the 5th of the following month at the appropriate class prices (depending on how the milk was used), if purchased from cooperative association handlers. For milk purchased directly from producers, the partial payments would be made at the Class II or manufacturing price (for the month preceding delivery) on or before the 7th day of the month following delivery. The payment deadline for purchases from cooperatives is two days prior to that for purchases directly from producers so that cooperatives will have the monies in hand to pay their members on the same date (the 7th) that other producers are paid.

Although partial payments currently are not required under the New York-New Jersey orders, it is a common industry practice to make such payments to cooperative associations, and in some (where competition dictates) to individual producers. The rates, time of payment and other aspects of such partial payments vary among handlers and cooperative associations.

ADA hires consultant

ROSEMONT, Ill. - J. David Groninger, 37, formerly of the Kraft Foods Company (11 years) and Kroger Foods Store (six years), has been appointed Dairy Marketing Consultant for the American Dairy Association (ADA).

Groninger's responsibilities in his new position will include training store personnel to operate supermarket dairy departments to maximize sales and profits. He will be joining a group of two-man dairy marketing consultant teams who conduct day-long training programs for chain executives and store personnel.

Groninger will be headquartered in ADA's Rosemont office. Later, he will be assigned to a team in a regional area of the United States.

While with Kraft Foods, Groninger was cited for the development of a dairy training seminar used in the training of Kraft salesmen and retail grocery personnel in their major accounts throughout the country. Prior to Kraft, he was a dairy and produce manager for the Kroger Foods Store.

New Fords unveiled

YORK — Ford Motor Company will bring a caravan of new under 90-horsepower tractors to a farm near here on September 1 and 2 for a series of field demonstrations for farmers.

The new Ford all-purpose tractors will feature factory-installed, noise-controlled, air conditioned cabs.

Actual demonstration will be at the J. E. Baker Farm, Baker Road, 1500 Feet North of Route 30. Tractors will perform a wide variety of farm work with special emphasis on the comfort and operating convenience of new factory-installed cabs.

"The under 90-horsepower range of Ford tractors historically has been the favorite of American farmers; this demonstration will prove to farmers here that Ford tractors can serve them more efficiently and comfortably than ever before," said a Ford Motor Company spokesman.

"Cabs at the lower horsepower end of the range — the 32-horsepower Model 2600 — are as roomy as these on the 84-horsepower Model 7600," he continued, "and all are available with optional air conditioning, AM-FM radios and citizen band receiver-transmitters."

Biologists join U of D

NEWARK, Del. - A plant physiologist who has found a new way to identify high yielding field corn lines and a weed scientist with a background in plant ecology have joined the faculty of the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Dr. High Frick, a plant physiologist formerly with the department of agronomy at Purdue University, brings with him a technique he developed there for screening hybrid field corn varieties which he hopes to use in identifying high yielding lines suitable to growing conditions in Delaware. The physiologist, who holds a PhD. in biological science from the State University of New York at Stony Brook, says that his technique is a simple, inexpensive laboratory alternative to the lengthy and costly field testing programs traditionally used by university experiment stations and commercial corn seed producers.

Also joining him on the faculty of the College of Agricultural Sciences is Dr. David L. Regehr, a weed scientist who holds a PhD. in botany with a specialty in the ecology of weeds from the University of Illinois at Urbana. Before coming to Delaware, Regehr was on the faculty of the University of South Dakota at Springfield. He plans to conduct research in two major weed areas of concern to Delaware farmers: (1) a study of weed-crop competition, specifically yellow nutsedge in corn and soybeans, and (2) a study of problem weeds in terms of their susceptibility to herbicide stress in combination with other stress factors, particularly water stress.

Announcement of the appointments was made by Dr. Donald F. Crossan, chairman of the department of plant science, who noted that the filling of the two vacancies restores needed strength in the teaching program of the department and in research on the two major crops in the state.

The York County Holstein picnic, held earlier this Summer at the Roy and Frank Feeser farm, Hanover, was climaxed with a junior calf dressing contest. Pictured above are the winners — Deanne and Melinda Feeser. A cow judging contest was also held with the following being winners: Glendora Stump, Rodman Thompson, David Ketner, Mark McWilliams, Myra McWilliams and Bridget Boyer.

Brainstorming session planned

CHICAGO, Ill. - A brainstorming session to stimulate new and exciting promotional ideas for the American Egg Board to use now and in the future will convene in Chicago on September 9.

Dr. Dean Portinga, a member of the Board, will moderate the full-day session participated in by members of the AEB Executive Committee, Planning Committee, and chairman of the standing committees. The group is seeking creative suggestions from throughout the industry.

The meeting's inception came from the AEB Planning Committee and was approved by the full Board. The Planning Committee, chaired by Maurice J. Pickler, felt that such a session could provide inspiration for creative approaches not yet explored.

According to John P. Wallace, chairman of AEB, some of the ideas emerging from this meeting could springboard to totally new promotional concepts.

"The future of the industry depends on the consumer's interest in and approval of eggs," said Wallace. "Every industryperson joining in the search for new and attractive appeals for eggs is doing the industry an invaluable service."

Suggestions are needed immediately for consideration at the meeting. Any and all ideas will be welcomed by the Board. Interested persons are urged to send their suggestions to: CREATIVE IDEAS, American Egg Board; 205 Touhy, Park Ridge, Ill. 60068.

College is teaching John Shenk how to farm — but he's never had an agriculture course

By JOANNE SPAHR

LITITZ - A 4-H exchange trip to North Carolina in 1971 was a milestone in the life of John Shenk, Lititz R3. Although he'd been to Wisconsin the year before with the same program, this particular trip put him on the track which led the way to four years of his life, and possibly to his entire future.

That particular year, John visited Buncombe County, N.C. In his allotted week's time, he discovered Warren Wilson College, the school he now hails as his alma mater and which is preparing him for a career in agriculture.

But, John is no ag major. In fact, Warren Wilson College doesn't even offer a program in agriculture.

"This year we'll be able to study related subjects in independent studies," he says, "courses like chemistry, biology, and so forth, but we don't have an agriculture degree."

In this case, then, how is John being prepared for a career in agriculture, if there are no dairy science, poultry science, agronomy, or ag economics courses offered at Warren Wilson?

The answer is simple. He's being prepared in the most practical, most natural, and often times the most lucrative manner - he's learning by experience on the 300 acre farm owned and run by Warren Wilson College.

Although the farm has 300 acres, only a small percentage of that acreage is tillable. The rest is forestland. In total, 70 acres are in corn, and the remainder in pastureland and forest. As for the beef and hog operation, the farm has 70 sows, 80 cows, most of which are Herefords, and two bulls. There is also a garden producing tomatoes, squash, beans, beets, and sunflowers.

The history of the farm is quite interesting. It is a remnant of the time when Warren Wilson was known as the Asheville Farm school. That was back in 1984 when the school was established by the Presbyterian Church to educate Appalachian mountain boys in need of assistance. At that point in time, and later, the school was self-sufficient even to the point of generating its own electricity.

But, of course, times have changed, and with them so has Warren Wilson. In 1941 it became a co-ed school and went to two-year college status. Since 1965 it has been a four-year liberal arts institution offering degrees ranging from art to music to physics. And now, it is an international community with 500 students from 29 countries and 30 states.

Although Warren Wilson College does not have an agriculture program, some students are nevertheless learning all about farming by working a 15 hour week on the 300-acres farm owned and operated by the college. The farm consists mostly of 80 Hereford cows and a 70-sow farrowing operation.

Also, the farm can no longer support the college's total enrollment. "It takes a lot of beef and a lot of crops to feed 500 people," explains John. "Ideally, we'd like to say we're self-sufficient, but the size is just too much."

So now, the farm is utilized as part of a work study program for which the school is well known. Under this program, each student must work 15 hours a week at the equivalent of $2 an hour. This pays for the cost of room and board, and reduces the tuition and fees, and if a student works in the summers, even more comes off his total bill.

There are 41 different areas in which a student can put in his working time. These areas range from working in the office to helping in the dorm, to laboring on the farm.

In the college handbook,

College is

the description of the farm work reads as follows: "FARM - 40 students - Gardening; grain and hay farming; beef and hog feeding, butchering, and related work; machinery maintenence, repair, painting, and operation; fence building and repair; tree planting; and harvesting."

But, surprisingly enough, with all that work to be done the farm crew is very popular. "There's a waiting list to get on the farm," Ernst Laursen, farm manager, was quoted as saying in another publication about the college.

The reason for the surprise at a waiting list for this farm is that of all the 41 areas students can choose to work in, farming hires the most people. And, as was stated, there is a crew of 40 students working under the farm manager. This number compares to an average of nine for all other 40 areas. Not only this, but farming is hard work compared to some of the other easy positions such as dorm counsellor or kitchen help.

"But it's great," declares John. "On the farm there are just so many things to do, and it's a great way to let out tension. Instead of going to a pool hall, you can go to work and earn your room and board."

That's not a statement that will be heard every day, but John means it. He's an interested young adult who knows the value of work and the value of farming.

"I went down there intending to learn more about farming and to learn a little on the side," he says in his clear, definitive manner.

What he has come up with is a practical philosophy on farming. Instead of sitting in a classroom, learning facts and figures about the trade, he has developed his own attitude on how to be a successful farmer.

"Actually, the only way to be a good farmer is to try new methods and watch for the results, modifying things if necessary," he explains.

John certainly is getting practical experience this summer in testing out his philosophy since he is one of seven or eight students who have stayed at Warren Wilson to work on the farm. When a 40 member crew is reduced to seven or eight, each one of that small number gets a real taste for what it's like to really farm.

"So far we haven't done anything special," John says. "In the beginning of the summer we planted the corn, and then we mowed the hay and took care of the tomatoes."

So, actually, even though John is three states south of Pennsylvania, the crops aren't much different from those here.

"The climate in that particular part of North Carolina is pretty much like here," explains John. "About the only difference is that the temperature is a little milder in the winter and in the summer."

And, the area is quite a bit more mountainous since the college is in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains.

John Shenk looks at a sunflower in his mother's garden at Lititz R3 to compare the difference between this one and those in the garden at Warren Wilson College.

"Sometimes when I'm up there with the mower it gets a little scary," John reflects. As one would expect, the bottomland is in corn while the hills are in pasture.

With all this mowing, planting tomatoes, making hay, etc., where do all the fruits of the labor go, if not back into the college?

"Usually we'll slaughter about 20 steers, package the meat, and sell it to the faculty," says John. The college also has a produce stand for the garden vegetables, and most of the corn which is harvested is put back into feed for the animals on the farm.

The machinery that is used is mostly old equipment which was either donated to the college or gotten as army surplus. Most of the time the students do the major repair work in the machine shop, but if the job gets too big, they hire a professional.

One lucky break came for Warren Wilson when a Lancaster minister helped to raise money for farm equipment. As a result, the college received a disc, a rake, a manure spreader, a mower, and a baler.

"These are the kinds of things that keep us going," says John in earnest.

Timbering is also part of the farm labor. Lumber which is cut is used for constructing new buildings, putting up fences, and similar activities. A small amount also goes to pulpwood.

So, in actuality, the farm is not out to make a profit or even sustain the college as a self-sufficient entity. It is primarily set up to be a learning experience for all involved.

John will attest to its success in this area.

"I really like the place a lot," he claims. "It teaches you farming, but more than that, it teaches you organization and how to work with people and understand them. And, the atmosphere and philosophy really round you out as a total person."

What more can a student ask of a college experience?

Trading limit increased

WASHINGTON — The Commodity Futures Trading Commission announced approval of an increase in the speculative position limits and the trading limits on wheat from two million bushels to three million bushels, the same limits now in effect for corn and soybeans.

The Commission took into consideration the observations of its Advisory Committee on the Economic Role of Contract Markets, which said speculative limits should be de-emphasized and replaced by more flexible and effective regulatory measures as a long-term policy. For the interim, the Committee recommended that speculative position limits be raised and restrictions on speculative trading relaxed.

The present flat numerical limit on the number of contracts a speculator may trade during the day actually cuts back participation of speculators at the very time when they are needed.

The new limits will apply to wheat futures contracts of the Chicago Board of Trade, the Board of Trade of Kansas City, Mo., the MidAmerica Commodity Exchange, Chicago, and the Minneapolis Grain Exchange.

They will be put into effect within ten days.

FFA hold summer tour

MANHEIM - On Tuesday, August 17, the Manheim FFA held their annual summer tour and picnic. All members were invited. At nine o'clock, approximately 35 members and two agriculture teachers arrived at the school. From here, the tour of five farms began. The farms visited were those of Ronald Kreider, Tim Good, David Keller, Dennis Kulp, and Steve and Larry Hershey.

A new dairy operation to take care of 500 cows was the drawing card of the Ronald Kreider farm. At the operation partly belonging to Tim Good, the FFA treasurer, Good's steers which are to be shown at the Farm Show were the main attraction. Good also showed his pigs which he owns in partnership with his father.

At the Keller farm, the hog farrowing set-up and new cage chicken house were the main attractions. Dave Keller is the Manheim FFA president.

Former member Dale Nolt showed his elaborate farrow-to-finish set-up to the tour members. He has a farrowing house in which he grows his pigs to between 40 and 100 pounds. Then, in his new finishing house he develops the hogs to approximately 220 pounds.

The farm of Dennis Kulp was the next stop. Here, Kulp showed his two Kutztown Fair dairy prospects.

The final stop was the farm of Larry Hershey and Steve Hershey. Two aspects viewed were the steers which they plan to exhibit at the Manheim Farm Show and their cage chicken house.

+LOSS OF VITAMIN A-D-E-K AND OTHERS. MOST VITAMINS ARE DESTROYED IN TEMPERATURES ABOVE 100 DEGREES UNTREATED SILAGE WILL RANGE FROM A MINIMUM 130 DEGREES TO A MAXIMUM OF OVER 200 DEGREES.
+LOSS OF DIGESTIBILITY OF PROTEIN. THE HOTTER THE SILAGE GETS, THE LOWER THE PROTEIN VALUE.
+LOSS OF PALATABILITY BY POOR FERMENTATION, CAN EASILY REDUCE RATE OF GAIN OR MILK PRODUCTION BY 25 PERCENT.
+LOSS OF SOLUBLE NUTRIENTS BY SEEPAGE HEATING RELEASES JUICE IN THE SILO IN THE SAME WAY AS COOKING MEAT AND VEGETABLES.
+SILAGE UNLOADS HARDER AND SLOWER BECAUSE EXCESS JUICING MATS IT DOWN AND ALSO RESULTS IN HARDER FREEZING.

WHEN DO THESE LOSSES HAPPEN?
IMMEDIATELY AFTER FILLING THE SILO THE FIRST 3 TO 7 DAYS ARE MOST CRITICAL DURING WHICH TIME THE HEATING REACHES ITS PEAK.

WHAT CAUSES THIS HEATING?
OXIDATION FROM THE AIR THAT IS BLOWN INTO THE SILAGE AND TRAPPED DURING FILLING AND THE OXYGEN CONTAINED IN THE PLANT THE DRIER THE SILAGE, THE COARSER (AND HARDER) IT CHOPS, THE POORER IT PACKS, THE MORE AIR IS TRAPPED, AND THE HOTTER IT GETS.

WHY?
OXYGEN IS WHAT CAUSES ANY FOOD TO SPOIL AND IT MUST BE ELIMINATED FROM THE SILAGE BEFORE PRESERVATION CAN TAKE PLACE. IN THE NORMAL PROCESS OF ELIMINATION A CHEMICAL REACTION OCCURS IN WHICH OXYGEN COMBINES WITH READILY AVAILABLE STARCHES AND SUGARS TO LITERALLY BURN ITSELF OUT.

DOES OXYGEN FREE SEALED STORAGE PREVENT THIS?
OXYGEN FREE STORAGE IS NOT OXYGEN FREE UNTIL AFTER THIS OXIDATION PERIOD IS OVER. COMMON SENSE TELLS YOU THAT JUST AS MUCH AIR IS TRAPPED DURING THE FILLING PROCESS REGARDLESS OF TYPE OF STORAGE. THE SAME THING HAPPENS AS EXPLAINED ABOVE THE DIFFERENCE IS THAT ONCE THE FILLER OPENING IS CLOSED AND THE SILO IS ACTUALLY SEALED, NO ADDITIONAL AIR CAN ENTER SURFACE SPOILAGE AND SILO LEAKAGE IS NOT A PROBLEM

STOP THESE LOSSES USE SILO KING

WHY DOES SILO-KING WORK?
SILO-KING CONTAINS A POTENT COMBINATION OF THE SAME ANTI-OXIDENTS USED TO PRESERVE HUNDREDS OF FOOD ITEMS IN OUR SUPER MARKETS. SILO-KING ALSO CONTAINS A POTENT COMBINATION OF FOOD GRADE EXZYMES AND FLAVORS.

THIS COMBINATION OF ANTI-OXIDANTS AND ENZYMES RESULTS IN A MUCH GREATER PRESERVATIVE EFFECT.

THEY ABSORB THE ATMOSPHERIC AND HYDROLYTIC OXYGEN ENERGY IN THE SILAGE TO PREVENT THE INITIAL OXIDATION WHICH CAUSES THE HEATING AND THE LOSSES.

THEY ALSO UTILIZE MOISTURE AVAILABLE IN THE SILAGE TO HELP SYNTHESIZE MORE SOLUBLE SUGARS WHICH HELP PRODUCE A HIGH QUALITY, SWEET SMELLING SILAGE WITH EXCEPTIONAL PALATABILITY.

BY REDUCING THE LEVEL OF OXIDATION, TEMPERATURE OF THE SILAGE IS MAINTAINED IN A RANGE OF 100 TO 110 DEGREES.

THIS IS THE IDEAL TEMPERATURE FOR FERMENTATION. THIS RESULTS IN A HIGHER PH [LOWER ACIDITY] AND A SILAGE OF VERY HIGH QUALITY.

MUELLER
FRE-HEATER™

EXPLANATION OF THE REVOLUTIONARY NEW MUELLER "FRE-HEATER™" FOR THE DAIRY FARM

Bulk milk coolers on modern dairy farms remove heat from the milk promptly after it is produced To accomplish this requires refrigeration machines and they are generally of the air-cooled type. Air-cooled condensing units literally "throw away" this valuable heat

On these same farms, large amounts of hot water are needed for "prepping" the cows, washing the milk cooler, the pipeline milker, other equipment, and the milking parlor itself It is also advantageous to heat the cows' drinking water in winter

The Mueller Fre-Heater conserves energy and provides "free" hot water by capturing the heat now wasted!

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

Rather than using noisy, dust-creating fans with fragile, dirt collecting air-cooled condensers, the refrigerant is routed to a specially designed condenser/heat exchanger and its heat is transferred to the water.

A thermostatically controlled valve delivers 145° F water to the storage tank

In addition to the thermostatic valve, a mixing valve is provided to permit "prepping" temperature water

Thus, the Fre-Heater delivers two temperatures of water — prepping and washing

Tests indicate the Fre-Heater consumes 10% less power than an air-cooled system . . . and you get Free Hot Water!

ELIMINATES REFRIGERATION SERVICE PROBLEMS!

The most common causes of slow cooling in bulk milk cooling systems are related to the air-cooled condenser

Three things which frequently reduce the efficiency are
1 Poor air circulation and recirculation
2 Fan motor failures
3 Dirty or clogged condenser fins

Air-cooled condensing units are generally installed out of doors in order to assure adequate air supply to the condenser This exposes the compressor to extreme ambient temperatures Starting problems and compressor failures have resulted and air-cooled condenser units are always noisy

The Fre-Heater eliminates these problems because:
- There is no air-cooled condenser
- The Fre-Heater is installed indoors
- There are no fans to generate noise.
- The head pressure is very stable — assuring longer compressor life
- There are no cold weather starting problems, plus

. . . the Fre-Heater conserves energy and produces Free Hot Water!

Save Energy and get FREE HOT WATER...

Facts for dairymen

By Alan Bair

Assoc. County Agent
Lancaster, Pa.

TEAT DIPPING IS WORTH THE EFFORT

"To do that, we're going to have to change help around here." This is not an uncommon response by a dairyman when I suggest he start dipping all cows teats as part of the daily milking routine. Are we really that insensitive to change that even when our very existance depends on it we cannot face it head-on?

There are a lot of things we don't know and don't understand about mastitis. But teat dipping has been shown to be an effective means to prevent new udder infections.

Ask a dairyman who is routinely using a teat dip and he will confirm the research data that this practice is "worth the effort". And what little effort it really is. The secret to good milking is an organized routine. As part of that routine, teat dipping will take a few more seconds and very little effort.

Make teat dipping as easy for the milkers as possible. In a parlor you may want a container at each stall and in a flat barn you will want one for each person milking. To get the most effectiveness from the dip and make the job easier, dipping should be done on the same trip to the cow that is required to remove the milker.

If you are having trouble convincing your milkers and yourself that teat dipping is "worth it", think of all the time, trouble, and expense you might save by cutting down on the number of new cases of mastitis in your herd.

The National Mastitis Council has done a lot of work on teat dips. The following list of products has been compiled by Dr. W. Nelson Philpot at Louisiana State University. Each has been tested by N.M.C. for effectiveness.

BRAND NAME

BIO-GUARD TEAT DIP: BOVADINE: CLOROX BLEACH (Prepared by mixing 1 qt. of water with 1 gallon of Clorox); MASTIMIN: MONARCH IODINE TEAT DIP (0.5 percent); MONARCH MIX 'N DIP CHLORINATED TEAT DIP POWDER: NOLVASAN TEAT DIP: TEAT GUARD: TEAT KOTE: TD-34 COSMETIC BASED TEAT DIP: UDDER GUARD.

NOTE: Effectiveness in preventing infections does not necessarily imply complete safety to animals because some teat dips occasionally cause teat irritation in specific herds.

PRO-SIL® Silage Activator

CUT FEED COSTS - MAXIMIZE PROFITS WITH PRO-SIL, THE SILAGE ACTIVATOR

HERE IS WHAT THE PRO-SIL USERS HAVE TO SAY ABOUT PRO-SIL

ROBERT HILTON
Damascus, MD

Robert Hilton farms 400 acres of land in Montgomery County, Maryland. He also milks 140 Holstein cows. A large portion of Robert's dairy feed comes from the 2500 tons of Pro-Silage that he puts in his trench silo.

Robert applies Pro-Sil in the field. When asked about the advantages of Pro-Sil Robert said, "I decreased the amount of grain ration I was feeding by 20 percent. My cows held their peak for a longer period than ever before."

LEROY MARTIN
RD1, Elizabethtown, PA

This is LeRoy Martin's second year of activating his corn silage with Pro-Sil. LeRoy says, "The biggest advantage is that Pro-Sil stabilizes my feed costs. I reduced the amount of grain ration being fed by 50 percent without sacrificing milk production."

LeRoy is convinced that Pro-Sil makes corn silage more palatable because of the way his cows consume Pro-Silage.

Beef research hearing slated

NEW YORK, N.Y. — A public hearing, with sessions in six cities across the country, has been scheduled by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to consider a proposed research and information order for beef. In this area the hearing will be at the Federal Building in Pittsburgh.

The Secretary of Agriculture was authorized to issue such an order by the Beef Research and Information Act enacted into law in May. Such an order would establish a Beef Board, composed of producers, which could conduct a research and information program for cattle and beef, funded by assessments on sales of cattle.

The proposed order to be considered at the hearing was submitted to USDA by the Beef Development Task Force composed of representatives of several national and state beef and dairy organizations.

According to an official in USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS), the purpose of the hearing, to be held in September and October, is to receive evidence concerning the need for a national beef research and information program and the provisions it should contain. The hearing will help the Secretary of Agriculture determine whether the proposed order furthers the objectives of the enabling legislation, and will provide opportunity for public examination of all provisions contained in the proposal. Any interested person may testify at any of the sessions, which will be continued beyond one day if necessary. Each hearing will begin at 9:30 a.m.

The AMS official said that all testimony will be taken under oath, with cross-examination permitted. Five copies will be required of published reports or other material offered as evidence.

The proposal provides for a nationally coordinated research and information program to be financed by an assessment of up to one-half of one percent of the value of each animal slaughtered, with provisions for a refund to producers not wishing to take part in the program.

The hearing is one of several steps to be taken by USDA in considering an order to establish a Beef Board. Detailed procedures were outlined in rules published in the Federal Register on June 23. If the Secretary reaches a decision to issue a final order, the next step would be registration and voting by producers in a nationwide referendum.

The order would become effective only if at least 50 per cent of the producers who registered vote, and if two-thirds of those vote affirmatively. If approved, the order would be administered by a Beef Board of not more than 68 members appointed by the Secretary from nominations submitted by organizations with a substantial beef producer membership.

Agriculture in new environment

STATE COLLEGE - In his invited address to the American Agricultural Economics Association, Dr. G. Edward Schuh, professor of agricultural economics at Purdue University, spoke to the new economic and political environment in which U.S. agriculture now finds itself. Penn State hosted the group for the first time in 20 years. The long process of outmigration from agriculture now appears to be approaching an end, our long-sustained growth in resource productivity appears to be leveling out, the U.S. economy is increasingly dependent on world trade - with the result that major shocks to the U.S. food and agriculture sector now come from abroad, and the institutions by which countries relate to each other are coming under increasing stress as the developing countries press for a new international economic order.

Schuh pointed out that these changes have major implications for agricultural policy and more general economic policy as well. For example, U.S. food prices are now determined in an international market, with the result that U.S. consumers now have a vested interest in the development of world agriculture. The decline in out-migration from agriculture means that new sources of labor supply and new sources of productivity growth will have to be sought out. And the U.S. has an increased interest in trade liberalization as a means of attenuating the shocks to the U.S. economy.

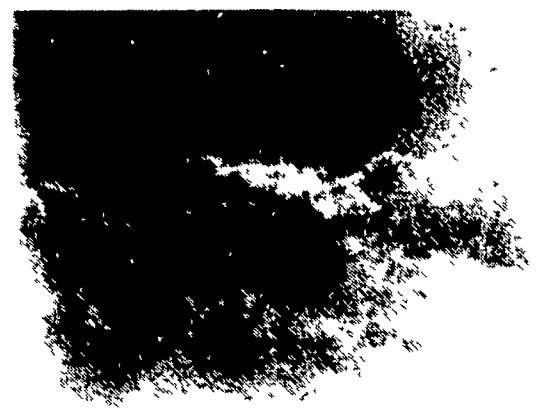
Man reaches high for weather repor

EDITORS NOTE — This is the third in a continuing series of stories on one of the most awesome forces on Earth - the weather.



By DIETER KRIEG

At about the time readers glance over this article, one more step will have been taken towards making weather forecasting a little more complete and reliable than it was yesterday.

Someone at the National Meteorological Center in Suitland, Md. is getting ready to give the "go to work" command to an object flying 935 miles above Earth's surface.

The high flying object is NOAA 5, a satellite which spirals its way around the Earth every 115 minutes in a pole to pole orbit. Once it becomes operational, the recently launched space vehicle will report its finding back to meteorologists below.

NOAA 5 is the fifth in a series of such satellites which have enabled weathermen to see Earth's weather patterns from out in space. In addition to television cameras, the package of instruments also includes radiometers which detect heat and light radiation, and recording devices for storage of information.

As the 678-pound NOAA spins its way north and south from pole to pole, the Earth itself is rotating. Thus NOAA gets to see all of the planet every 24 hours, and due to an overlapping pattern it actually scans each spot twice daily.

NOAA's pictures and other data are processed through computers in making weather forecasts and issueing warnings. It represents just one of many developments which have made weather forecasting more than 80 percent accurate over a two to three day period.

In addition to the five NOAA satellites (two have been turned off, a third will be cut out of service once NOAA 5 is turned on) there are also what's known as geostationary satellites. Three in number, these GOES satellites take stationary positions some 22,300 miles above Earth. Unlike the NOAA series, GOES hovers over one spot, but like NOAA, they gather vast amounts of information which are useful in predicting the weather and invaluable in lessening potential catastrophies. The GOES satellites are in fact often referred to as "natural disaster satellites" because of their remarkable capability of spotting potential storms.

A third high flying device used by the Weather Service is the GHOST balloon which scouts the stratosphere - a portion of the heavens which is too high for airplanes and too low for satellites. These specially designed vehicles carry instrument packages aloft to heights of 80,000 to 135,000 feet.

And the input of information doesn't end there. Consider these statistics:

Weather computers around the world receive some 2500 reports per day from commercial and military aircraft as they charge their way through fair skies and clouds. An equal number of daily reports are sent from ships out in the oceans, where much of the world's weather originates. On land, there are more than 1000 weather stations which take part in weather forecasting. All told, billions of bits of information pour into forecasting headquarters which are staffed by men and computers.

In spite of these vast efforts by man to understand the weather - and possibly even control it, there's still much to be covered and learned.

The late John von Neumann, a mathematician who pioneered the idea of using computers for analyzing weather, said: "The hydrodynamics of meteorology presents without doubt the most complicated series of interrelated probl not only that we know of but that we can imagine."

And so the search for more clues goes on — with NOA GOES, GHOSTS, and computers playing a big role in adventure. We'll explore more of that, as well as other an next week and in following weeks.

Penna. Beef Council formed

STATE COLLEGE - The Pennsylvania Beef Council, a non-profit organization, was formed recently in Harrisburg. The Beef Council is designed to assist individuals and groups involved in beef cattle production and marketing in carrying out an educational, promotional, or research program. Although recently formed, several different activities have been planned for the Beef Council.

The Council will act as a clearing house for questions from consumers regarding the methods and efficiency of beef production, and help to provide educational materials to consumers, youth groups, and other individuals regarding the identification and use of beef cuts and products. The Beef Council will also assist in obtaining funds for various types of research and demonstration projects which would be beneficial to the producer and the consumer.

According to Dr. L. L. Wilson, secretary of the Council and professor of animal science at Penn State "our Pennsylvania beef industry has no coordinated beef promotion, education and research program such as many other industries. We are not strictly a promotional organization; informing and helping consumers, retailers, and the producer is our main goal."

The Pennsylvania Beef Council does not have a membership dues structure, but is relying totally upon gifts and is also obtaining funds from a voluntary contribution from producers of 15 cents for each head of livestock sold or slaughtered. The Beef Council joins with similar groups in over 30 other states and with the National Livestock and Meat Board in a nation-wide effort.

The board of directors of the Beef Council is composed of Dick Sanders, Lewisburg; Bob Coleman, Harrisburg; Paul Espy, Tyrone; Lowell Wilson, State College; Harry Stambaugh, Green Park; Everett Denlinger, Harrisburg; Wayne Miller, Mount Joy; Harold Rotz, Waynesboro; and Bill McCoy, Lancaster.

Individuals or groups wishing more information about the Beef Council or having needs for exhibit materials, handout bulletins on beef production or menus, marketing information, etc., should contact the Beef Council office at 862 Webster Drive, State College, Pa.

Economists urged to be involved

STATE COLLEGE - Dr. Kenneth R. Farrell, deputy administrator of the USDA'S Economic Research Service and incoming president of American Agricultural Economics Association, urges agricultural economists to become more deeply involved in analysis of public policy issues related to food and agriculture. In his presidential address, "Public Policy, the Public Interest and Agricultural Economics," Farrell presented an overview of policy issues growing out of agriculture's interdependency with other sectors of the economy, national and international. Predicting that social, economic and political conflict between agricultural and other interest groups will continue to heighten over such matters as energy and land use, environmental quality, foreign trade and performance of the food and fiber complex, Farrell urged the economists to develop new clientele and professional alliances and to experiment with new institutional arrangements to improve their policy analysis. He made his comments here at Penn State University during the annual meeting of the American Agricultural Economics Association.

One of his major recommendations was creation of a national food and agricultural policy institute endowed by public and-or philanthropic foundation funds. The purpose of the institute would be to conduct basic, long-run policy analysis of a multi-disciplinary nature. He also recommended that the American Agricultural Economics Association commission a series of papers identifying major policy issues affecting food and agriculture and that it undertake a series of seminars, workshops and public forums to stimulate interest and public understanding in food and agricultural policy.

Many folks have lawn problems needing attention, but one bit of relief this time of the year is that the grass does not need to be mowed as often as earlier in the spring. Most turf grasses will grow much slower during extreme hot weather; in fact, some grasses such as Kentucky Bluegrass will go dormant during weather of 90 degrees or more; this is natural and property owners need not try to survive it until colder weather arrives. However, during hot weather some soil insects may move in and eat at the grass roots; grubs and chinch bugs are quite common in this area and can be controlled by spraying with Sevin, Diazinon, or Dylox. Details on the symptoms of these insects are available at our Extension Office. Many lawns have a buildup of thatch (old rotten clippings); the dethatching of the lawn with special equipment is suggested for early September in this part of the State; a publication on this lawn practice is also available.

Md. man heads NACAA

RICHMOND, Va. — For the second time in eight years, a Maryland resident has taken the helm as president of the National Association of County Agricultural Agents. The new president is Robert L. Jones of Westminster (Carroll County), a University of Maryland graduate and a 24-year veteran of the university's Cooperative Extension Service.

His Old Line State predecessor was Roscoe N. Whipp of the Shady Grove area at Rockville (Montgomery County), who served as NACAA president in 1968-69. Whipp retired in 1973 after almost 31 years as a 4-H and youth agent in Montgomery county.

Jones was elected earlier this month at the 61st annual meeting of the NACAA, held here. He had served successively as vice-president and president - elect of the national county agents organization. And he was general chairman for the group's 1973 annual meeting, held in Baltimore.

The new NACAA president has been the Carroll County Extension chairman since 1964.

Jones is an ex officio member of the Carroll County Planning and Zoning Commission, Parks and Recreation Commission, Economic Development Commission, and the board of governors of the Carroll County Farm Museum. He is also secretary of the Carroll county soil conservation district.

A Harford county native, Jones grew up on a farm near Street and graduated in the vocational agriculture curriculum at Highland high school. After earning the B.S. degree in general agriculture from the University of Maryland at College Park in 1950, he began his career in Extension as an assistant county agent in Prince Georges county.

Prestige for sale

HARRISBURG — Looking for a little extra attention?

You can get it now by reserving one of the special registration plates which PennDOT's Bureau of Motor Vehicles will begin issuing for the first time in 1977.

In other states, the special plates have been known for years as "vanity plates" or "prestige plates."

Whether or not they boost vanity or prestige, they do call attention to the owner at an additional fee of $20 for the first year only.

Maybe you have a special fondness for your dog. Put it on your license plate. "FIDO" will fit just fine.

Whatever the combination of letters and numbers you may want, you have to reserve them with the Motor Vehicles Bureau now if you want to carry those numbers and letters on your new plate.

And you can reserve them with a form (MV-900) available at any Motor Vehicle Bureau office, Motor Club, District Magistrate or Notary Public, plus the $20 reservation fee. But give the Bureau three choices.

If your choice of numbers and letters is cleared they will appear on your registration application which will be mailed by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles next Fall for the 1977 registration year.

You will then pay the regular $24 registration fee.

Allentown beef shows praised by L. Burdette

ALLENTOWN — The Krause sisters, Diane and Carol, of Slatington R1 repeated this year as exhibitors of the grand champion and reserve champion 4-H baby beef at the Allentown Fair.

They had shown the grand champion and reserve champion 4-H steers in that same order, at last year's Fair.

The FFA grand champion was shown by Cathleen Muth, 19, of Alburtis R1. Grant Grim, 16, of Breinigsville had the reserve grand champion.

The judge for the beef show was Lester Burdette, Extension animal scientist at Penn State University, who last judged here two years ago.

"In general, this was a much better show than when I was here two years ago," Burdette said, "It shows that the 4-H leaders, ag teachers and county agents have been doing a lot of work with the boys and girls.

"The quality ran much deeper in the individual classes. For me, this is one of the better shows of beef judging in the last couple years."

The winning Krause sisters are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kraise of Newside.

For Diane, 13, this is her fifth year of competition. Her grand champion, "Clyde," weighed 1155 pounds, a heavyweight black and white cross that is a combination of Hereford, Angus and Maine-Anjou.

Carol, 15, also competing for her fifth year, got the reserve championship with "Sambo", a grey-colored Angus and Semmintal cross weighing 1175 pounds.

Miss Muth's FFA grand champion was "Patches," a heavyweight Charolais and Hereford cross. Miss Muth is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Muth Jr. This is her fifth year in fair competition.

The FFA reserve champion owned by Grant Grim was "Shenandoah" a heavyweight Hereford and Chinania cross. Grim, in his sixth year at the fair, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Grim.

The Krause sisters were first and second for the 4-H heavyweight class. Animals shown by Sarah Fretz of Steiger tractors, ranging from 210 to 325 horsepower in size, were featured at the field day. Tractors were furnished by farmers in the area and C. B. Hoober, Inc. of Intercourse, who handles the big tractors.

Steiger tractors demonstrated

CHESTERTOWN, Md. - Farms in this part of Maryland, commonly referred to as the Eastern Shore, are somewhat similar to those found in the Midwest. The terrain is basically flat, and fields are huge. And they're adaptable to the same type of equipment used in the Great Plains.

In recent years - especially the past year - the big machines which were once an exclusive Midwestern sight, have been making strong inroads on agriculture on the Eastern Shore and surrounding areas.

Earlier this month, a field day was held near here on the Pete Cronshall farm which featured seven four-wheel-drive tractors ranging in power from 210 to 325 horsepower. The seven behemoths, built by the Steiger Co., were being demonstrated along with tillage equipment to give prospective buyers and interested farmers an idea of what these "monsters" could do.

Cronshall farms approximately 1600 acres, according to C.B. Hoober Inc, a Lancaster County, Pa. farm equipment dealership which sponsored the event. Approximately 350 people attended the all-day show. Hoober, who has sold at least 15 Steigers during the past year, noted that the big four-wheel drive tractors are becoming more and more popular. They're gaining special favor in this area due to the type of farming which is predominant here. A number of farmers till 1500 acres or more with soybeans and corn being the main crops.

Aside from the Steigers being demonstrated here, Hoober also had a 41-foot disk harrow, a plow with ten 18-inch bottoms, a nine-tooth subsoiler and other tillage equipment on hand. Manufacturers represented were the Steiger Corporation, Sunflower

Broilers, eggs counted

HARRISBURG - Poultry production in the Commonwealth continued above 1975 levels during the week ending August 18, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. Placements of broiler chicks were 1,592.000.

The placements were nine per cent above the corresponding week a year ago, but four per cent below the previous week. Average placements during the past ten weeks were 16 per cent above a year earlier.

In the 21 key poultry producing states, placements were 63,940.000. This figure is one per cent below the previous week but 11 per cent more than the same week in 1975.

Average placements during the past ten weeks in the 21 states were 12 per cent above a year ago.

HARRISBURG - Pennsylvania layers produced 252 million eggs during July, about the same as last month but seven per cent less than a year earlier according to the Crop Reporting Service.

The July average of 12.3 million layers was down two per cent from the previous month and down seven per cent from a year earlier.

Egg production per 100 layers during July totaled 2,043 eggs, up two per cent from the previous month but down one per cent from a year earlier.

The nation's laying flocks produced 5.4 billion eggs during July, up two per cent from the previous month and slightly above July 1975. The number of layers during July averaged 268 million, about the same as last month but one per cent below a year earlier. The average rate of lay during the month was up one per cent from a year earlier.

Septic tanks too small

Your septic tank may be too small if it needs cleaning nearly every year.

Septic tanks for many rural homes are not as large as they should be. A Department of Environmental Resources regulation states that the capacity of the tank must be based on the number of bedrooms in the home. Three bedrooms or less require a 900 gallon capacity tank; four bedrooms a 1000 gallon tank. For each additional bedroom the capacity is increased by 100 gallons.

A properly constructed sewage system for a rural home consists of a house sewer, a septic tank, an outlet sewer, and a disposal field. The house sewer takes waste from the house to the septic tank. The outlet sewer passes liquids from the tank to the disposal field.

The size of the disposal field needed depends on its location, soil type, and the amount of water used in the home. The slower soil absorbs water, the larger the disposal field must be.

If you are having trouble with sluggish drains, or if the sewer backs up and toilet overflows, open the septic tank to see if it needs cleaning. You may need to extend the tile disposal field, or perhaps install a new one, if the sludge from the tank has overflowed into the tile lines.

TRIVIA

Child Injuries

A recent study found that unrestrained children in the front right seat have the highest automobile-related injury rate Children, according to the study, are least likely to be injured in car crashes if they are restrained and in the back seat, and are most likely to be injured if unrestrained and in the front seat

TV Time

Census data indicates that 96 per cent of American homes have at least one television set The average elementary school child spends about 21 hours a week sitting in front of the television set

Moving Around

About 1 8 million people five years of age and over, moved to the Southern part of the United States in the last five years During 1970-75, more than 40 per cent of all persons over age five moved from one place to another For the 25-29 year age group, it was 72 per cent For those 20-24 and 30-34, it was about 60 per cent

Common sense means boat safety

UNIVERSITY PARK - Common sense, proper equipment, and "know-how" are keys to boating safety, says John Sullivan, Community Resource Development assistant for the Schuylkill County Cooperative Extension Service.

Match your boat, motor, and equipment to your particular ability. For example, one person in a 12-foot boat with a 3-horsepower motor may be safe on a small lake, but loading four people in the same boat with a larger motor in a large lake can lead to disaster.

Make sure your boat and motor are in safe and sound operating condition before each trip. Balance the load carefully, keep everyone seated in small boats, and be sure that you have adequate safety equipment to handle emergencies.

Most boats have a rating plate attached on the back which states the load and horsepower limits. These are maximum ratings, not necessarily the recommended ones.

Carelessness often plays a part in boating accidents. Life jackets too often are thrown in the bottom of the boat because they are too clumsy or awkward to wear. One possible solution is to wear a light-weight waist type ski preserver and have an additional approved jacket or cushion for each passenger in the boat. Be sure that all life-saving devices are in good and serviceable condition.

AFBF president speaks out on cholesterol, consumerism, etc.

US has 'national epidemic of idiocy'

SPRINGFIELD, Mass — A national farm leader today blamed "psuedo science in place of research" for generating costly and needless consumer and regulatory pressures on agriculture. He said that although farmers get the blame for these new costs, they translate into higher food prices for everyone

Speaking at the Northeastern Poultry Convention, Allan Grant, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, called for an end to what he termed "a national epidemic of idiocy stemming from the consumerist movement, regulatory over-reaction, the additive issue, the Delaney amendment, the flap over cholesterol, and most recently, action by the Federal Trade Commission on egg advertising."

In his talk, Grant noted that the Delaney amendment to the Federal Food and Drug Act calls for "zero tolerance of substances thought to be harmful, even if the harm would result only from the ingestion of massive amounts over great periods of time" He said that improved laboratory methods have allowed detection of minute portions of such substances, some of which occur naturally in certain foods, and that the Delaney amendment should be modified to permit setting safe tolerances based upon competent research

Grant called for thorough and competent research to replace the pseudo science that now pervades the food industry. "Arbitrary and illogical" is the way he described a Federal Trade Commission order restraining egg advertisers from stating there is no evidence that eating eggs increases the risk of heart attacks — without their adding a disclaimer that not all people agree

"Since the cholesterol issue is far from settled, it seems logical that manufacturers of egg substitutes and polyunsaturated foods advertised as especially safe and healthful, should be treated the same under the FTC order.

"Check what the experts are saying," Grant invited. "One team reports that a 'fatty agent' — not cholesterol — may be the villain. Another research team says 'put the blame on genetics, not eggs or other high-cholesterol foods.'

"A researcher at the University of Delaware says he thinks an enzyme — not cholesterol — is the cardiac factor. Two other doctors say that a substance called 'lecithin' — found in eggs, butter and milk — 'tends to dissolve dangerous cholesterol deposits.'

"With all these, and other conflicting reports, who can blame the public for becoming confused? But, does the FTC know something that all of the researchers so far have not discovered?

"There is more than the 1st Amendment right of free speech involved here, for if the Federal Trade Commission has such power to suppress a valid viewpoint, think what this means in terms of other farm products and other people," Grant said.

Beef prices drop

DENVER, Colo. — The American National Cattlemen's Association last week reported further declines in average retail beef prices across the nation.

The Denver-based association's monthly survey of supermarkets in 19 cities shows an average price of $1.36 per pound for the five representative beef cuts surveyed. This most recent price survey indicates a decline of eight cents per pound from the average of $1.44 on July 8, and a decline of 28 cents per pound from prices a year ago.

With the exception of a slight increase during May, beef prices have been on the decline for most of this year, according to ANCA president Wray Finney. "As a matter of fact, beef is one of the few food products being sold at a much lower price than a year ago."

The reason, Finney says, is the basic law of supply and demand. Supplies have been much larger than expected for the summer months, and this has caused substantial decreases in cattle and wholesale beef prices.

"Cattlemen are losing large sums of money because of increased costs and lower prices," he noted, "but that situation isn't going to continue forever. When supplies are reduced, prices will rise. Right now, consumers are enjoying the best beef bargains they've seen in months."

Restrictions reduced

NEW YORK, N.J. - Restrictions on swine movements, imposed on New Jersey Aug. 2 because of hog cholera, have been reduced to cover only a nine-county area in the southern portion of the state, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced.

Federal quarantines and a New Jersey "hold order" are still in effect on swine within Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, Atlantic, Salem, Camden, Burlington, Mercer, and Ocean counties. However, regulations have been relaxed to allow swine from these counties to be shipped directly to slaughter after inspection and issuance of special permit by federal or state officials.

Officials of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) explained that all herds found to be infected with or exposed to hog cholera to date have been in the southern portion of the state. Hog cholera was confirmed Aug. 3 on a farm in Cape May county in the extreme southern tip of the state.

Milk was once 'welcome by-product'

EDITOR'S NOTE: (Story contributed by Hank Rudderow, Mars-Haven Farm, Mt. Laurel, N. J.)

The American Indians had no cattle, wild or domesticated, and consequently the first cattle to appear in the colonies originated in the Old World. The first settlers at Jamestown did not have cows until 1609, two years after the first pioneers arrived. Besides the stormy passage to the New World, these cattle also had to survive the Indians who would steal them for food.

The cattle of the early colonists were nondescript animals valued chiefly for their meat, hides, and work in the field. Smaller than today's breeds, they were known as Danes, Debonshires, and Brindles for the most part. There were various forms and shades of "reds" and "yellows" and combinations of the two. However, almost any sort of cow gives some milk and this was then a welcomed by-product. In frontier America no one raised cows primarily to sell milk, cheese, or butter. People did sell these things, but only as a sideline. Most often, cheese and butter were stored for winter and then later bartered for goods. The market for fluid milk was limited by transportation and consumer habits. Colonial people were not avid milk drinkers ... they often preferred more stimulating beverages.

During the early years of colonization, even the village dwellers kept one or two cows. They roamed the streets and fields. It has been said that cows had to be removed from the Boston Common in 1776, to make way for the assembling British Army, called to repress the local militia.

The dairy was one of the farm wife's many duties. She did the milking and made and sold the products.

American pioneers did not provide their cattle with the best of treatment. Typically, early American farmers neither sheltered nor fed their cattle in the winter. Most cattle, left to shift for themselves, not only propagated, they became fairly vigorous and hardy but did not produce very much milk. Four quarts of milk per day at most was considered a good yield.

Commercial dairying flowered in the 1800's. Until then it had remained an unimportant industry for one major reason ... dairy products spoil rapidly without proper care. I. order to turn to commercial dairying, the farmer had to have a market need, at hand, large enough to assure that he could sell, promptly, all that he produced.

Dairying first arose as a commercial business, close to the large cities of the day. Commercial dairying near New York, Boston, and Philadelphia began around 1812.

As market needs became larger, more attention was paid to obtaining greater production per cow. Land was fenced and each farmer kept his own stock at home Forage production began to increase and cattle began to produce more milk because they had more to eat. And, most importantly, farmers then became interested in breeding more productive cattle. By the mid 1800's farmers were showing interest in measuring and recording the production of their cattle. This, coupled with shows where the best producers were exhibited, created an increasing interest in developing more productive cattle.

It was during this era - the early to mid 1800's - that the dairy breeds, as we know them today, came to America. Jerseys and Guernseys came from the Channel Islands in 1815 and 1831 respectively. Ayrshires came from Scotland in 1822, Holsteins from Holland in 1857, and Brown Swiss from Switzerland in 1869.

By 1861, the average American dairy cow was producing 1,800 quarts of milk annually. Since that time, tremendous progress has been made. Most of the progress has been made. Most of the progress has resulted from research and extension teaching in the country's Land Grant Colleges. Improvements in the methods of selection, breeding, feeding, and management have reached a point where the modern American dairy cow averages close to 5,000 quarts of milk per calendar year.

Yes, our dairy cow has come a long way since she first stepped on the new continent. In the process, she has created a way of life for the American dairy farmer and influenced the health and well-being of millions.

Young Children's Eating Habits Children usually aren't neat when they're learning to eat. Small children often spill food and eat messily. Rather than fret about the mess after each mea, extension nutritionists at Penn State suggest arranging the child's place with dishes, linens, furniture and floor covers that won't be ruined by spills. A piece of sheet plastic under the child's chair will not only protect the dining room floor or carpeting, but keep parents from becoming upset.

see and hear the smoothest running Fox® harvesters ever built easy on power. so quiet that farmers call 'em— the hummers

You'll find a lot to see but not very much to hear when you check out the new Fox hummers

That's because Fox engineering went all out to bring you new forage harvesters so smooth running you hardly can hear the harvester over the sound of your tractor.

We use rubber drives and rubber gathering belts instead of chains, a new almost vibrationless rotary knife on the corn head, big tapered roller cylinder and gear box bearings for smoothness, a solid PTO drive shaft with center support bearing to eliminate "whip"

All this, plus special safety and acoustical shielding and precision component fit, results in the low, steady hum that inspired the nickname· the hummers

In the long run Fox super smoothness has several economic advantages. It means low friction, low-wear operation. Also important, it means lower power demands

Before you buy any forage harvester, ask your Fox dealer to demonstrate a new hummer for you. There are four great high capacity models: one will match your tractor So think about trading up to the forage harvester that's always been worth more when you trade again—even if it's five or ten years from now See and hear the hummers now For full information, write address below.

Urban-rural areas imbalanced

UNIVERSITY PARK - Government programs stimulate rural development, although not always intentionally. Regional growth has often tended to be a disequilibrium process, and national concern for regional economic imbalances frequently calls for government intervention.

Economic advances shift from region to region, partly in response to impacts of government programs on: increasing resource availabilities, advancing technology, expanding markets, conquering space, and building institutions.

That was the thrust of a presentation here this summer at the annual meeting of the American Agricultural Economics Association.

Clark Edwards - An economist with the Economic Research Service (ERS), U.S. Department of Agriculture - told the meeting that despite recent gains, symptoms of rural-urban imbalance remain.

Nationally, rural income per capita is around three-fourths of urban income. The incidence of rural poverty is twice that of urban areas. Well-being varies among geographic areas despite public and private efforts aimed at both rural and regional development.

Advances in rural farm and nonfarm technology were seen as an important source of growth during the past decade. Programs to improve productivity of capital through public and private efforts to modernize plants, and to improve labor productivity through education and on-the-job training were cited.

Federal programs to expand markets for rural products are mostly focused on exports. Developing domestic for markets rural products depends more on local public and private activity.

Spatial changes to enhance rural growth depend largely on improvements in transportation and communications. Coalitions of local governments, such as multicounty planning districts, focus on overcoming regional and spatial problems.

Be careful when canning cream-style corn

CHESTER - The Cooperative Extension Service of Penn State University, discourages the canning of cream-style corn and leafy green vegetables.

Canned greens or cream-style corn may be family favorites, but home canning of these vegetables is not recommended, even though most authoritztive canning references outline procedures.

Problems involve high risk of botulism when canning procedures are not strictly followed, possible poor quality of these home-canned products, and high energy costs from lengthy processing time.

Both cream-style corn and greens must be heat processed in a pressure canner. Processing time for hot-filled pints of cream-style corn is 85 minutes at 240 degrees F., with 10 pounds pressure and 95 minutes for cold-packed pints. Quart jars should never be used because the danger of botulism is too high.

This lengthy processing often results in severe darkening of the corn. And even though recommended procedures are carefully followed, high starch content in some varieties of sweet corn or in overly mature corn may 'cause underprocessing and possible spoilage, especially when jars are packed too tightly.

Leafy, g·een vegetables must be processed 70 minutes at 240 degrees F with 10 pounds pressure for pints, and 90 minutes for quarts. Jars packed too tightly with hot, wilted greens may be underprocessed even though recommended processing time is followed. This means high risk of spoilage, and danger of botulism.

The Extension service suggests that if you have an abundance of corn or green, leafy vegetables in your garden, to try freezing rather than canning them. Commercial canners are able to control the safety of their canned corn and greens as carefully as any other canned food. But for the home canner, it is risky.

Ag subsidies defended

STATE COLLEGE - Conventional wisdom has it that farm programs during the 1950's and 1960's constituted a large subsidy to U.S. agriculture, and that owners of agricultural land received the benefits of such programs, at the expense of urban consumers. Two researchers at Purdue University point out that there is growing recognition that this interpretation neglects the rather serious discrimination that agriculture suffered as a result of the persistent overvaluation of the dollar in this period, and attempt to analyze the effect of the programs in the context of the dollar exchange rate having been set by market forces.

Their analysis assumes that price support programs may have done little more than offset the effects of the over-valued dollar. But in their view this does not leave agriculture unaffected. Because of the full set of monetary and fiscal policies that were used to stem the gold outflow and to maintain some sense of equilibrium in the balance of payments, the agricultural labor force had to bear the burden of the adjustment to the over-valued dollar. Their analysis also helps explain why a set of policies came into effect that favored land owners. Without such policies, land owners would have borne the brunt of the over-valued dollar.

Maruo Lopes is a Brazilian graduate student doing work leading to the PhD degree in the department of agricultural economics at Purdue. G. Edward Schuh is professor of agricultural economics in the same department. They presented their study during a meeting of the American Agricultural Economics Association and the Northeastern Agricultural Economics Council, which was held here this summer.
